EXPLANATORY NOTE

þ = th.

ȝ = g or y; sometimes at the end of a word it may mean h or gh, pronounced or silent.

u = u or v as the case may be.

i is sometimes shown short and sometimes long (i or I). Whenever instances of its use in the latter form can be expressed by the more modern 'j' this has been done: e. g. both the forms 'iewis' and 'jewis', 'ion' and 'jon', &c., will be found in the transcript. The long I is generally used to indicate the personal pronoun or the beginning of a sentence. (See Facsimile, f. 387 r, lines 1 and 3, and last line: 'In all heŕ peynes þe'.)

Only the punctuation actually indicated in the MS. itself has been entered in the transcript.

Italics in the text of the transcript represent contractions, which, for the sake of convenience, have been expanded and written in full. Words underlined in the same are underlined in the MS. (See Facsimile, f. 387 r, lines 5, 16, and 17.) Whether this was done by the writer or by a reader is difficult to say. It has therefore been shown in every case wherever it occurs.

PREFACE

FOUR years ago this MS. was shown to the Rev. H. M. Bannister by Mr. Madan, one of the Bodleian Librarians, with the suggestion that he should publish it if he thought it of sufficient value. It so happened that the editor was present on this occasion, and when Mr. Bannister made a short examination of the MS., the first chapter which came under particular notice was that entitled 'Omnis terra'. This expression alone, as applied to Monte Testaccio, sufficed to show that the work was of considerable interest, and likely to yield some valuable information.

Mr. Bannister, whose whole time is fully occupied with his own special studies, could not, however, find leisure to undertake the necessary transcription, and the editor—although he had never attempted anything of the kind before—offered to do his best if Mr. Bannister would kindly help him with his advice. Mr. Bannister was good enough to promise his assistance, and it has been most generously given; indeed, it is not too much to say that, without it, the editor would have been quite unequal to the task for want of experience.

At this time the name of the author was unknown; but it was hoped to be able to ascertain the date of the work, to compare the facts therein mentioned with those given by known contemporaries, and so test the accuracy and powers of observation of the writer. Fortunately, the MS. yielded abundant information on these points. It was clear that he was an Augustinian friar, and the author of another work entitled *Concordia*¹ (see p. 92 and the facsimile of f. 387 r of the MS.); that he was in Rome during the pontificate of Nicholas V (1447–54); and that he came on a pilgrimage under the special protection of Sir Thomas Tudenham, a gentleman of Norfolk, near King's Lynn, who was executed for high treason in 1461. As there was an Augustinian house at King's Lynn, the natural inference was that the author came from it. Whether or not he wrote the book in England from notes taken in Rome—from internal evidence it is probable that he did—he must have gathered the information he gives us between the years 1447 and 1452, inasmuch as he mentions the recent death of Henry Beaufort, Bishop of Winchester, who died April 11, 1447, and describes John Kempe as Cardinal of S. Balbina and Archbishop of York, which he ceased to be in July, 1452, on promotion to the higher rank of Cardinal Bishop of S. Rufina and Archbishop of Canterbury. From several passages one can infer that Rome was much crowded when he was there, so that he probably took part in the Jubilee of 1450, for in the fifteenth century the population of Rome was not great.

Fortunately we have other records of pilgrims about this period, notably Giovanni Rucellai, a Florentine merchant, and Niklaus Muffel, a Nürnberg patrician. We have Ranulf Higden and Adam de Usk (an official of the Papal Court) for the period from 1350 circa to 1415, before our chronicler's visit; we can also consult von Harff's Pilgerfahrt, and the anonymous author of Ein Büchlein, &c., Strassburg, 1500, for the latter part of the fifteenth century.

But the most complete test of our author's accuracy is that he was in the habit of copying inscriptions and lists of relics in most of the churches which he visited. From those inscriptions which still exist (and there are several) it will be seen that our Augustinian friar is in every case letter-perfect. We can therefore accept his testimony as to those which have since disappeared. His keenness of observation is remarkable, and he has this one great superiority to most mediaeval writers: viz., that he is most careful not to put down a thing unless he has either seen it himself, or has, in his opinion, the best of authority for it. As examples of this refer, firstly, to what he says about the archus Prisci Tarquini (p. 45): and, secondly, about the relics at S. Lawrence in Panisperna (p. 102). In the former case he reproaches himself, and admits frankly that he either did not take the trouble to see, or failed to find the monument, and in the second that he did not make a copy of the list of relics because of the press of people there at the time. His topography is, as a rule, most accurate, and he is a most careful observer and a well-read man. For his facts regarding ancient Rome he depends on the Mirabilia, the guide-book of all educated pilgrims of this period. It is also interesting to note that after his death he is sometimes styled 'Beatus', and Henry VII is known to have made an effort to have him canonized.

There is a great wealth of mediaeval legendary lore in Part I of the MS. This has been compared with the works of some of the best authors on this subject, notably Adinolfi and Graf. The author takes this opportunity of acknowledging his indebtedness to Graf's Roma nella memoria e nell'immaginazione del Medio Evo, 2 vols., Turin, 1880, a book which has been of the greatest help, and has been very freely quoted. The legends regarding the lives of the saints in Parts II and III have also been compared with the recognized authorities on this subject.

It will be observed that the editor has not entered upon any critical examination of the work or the text, for which, indeed, he feels that he is not qualified. He has merely made what he hopes is a faithful transcript, and has further attempted to illustrate the MS. by quoting from the writings of contemporary authors, and of others who have dealt with the subject-matter of this chronicle. The present volume was originally intended only to be published privately for the members of the British and American Society of Rome, as an interesting description of Rome by an English pilgrim. The editor had, at first, no idea of appealing to a wider audience. But a discovery made only a few weeks ago, at the time when this book was ready for publication, has thrown an entirely new light upon it. The author's identity has now been ascertained. This is a hitherto lost work of John Capgrave, Prior of King's Lynn and Provincial of the Augustinian Order, a well-known writer and historian of the fifteenth century. The discovery was made in the following manner.

On his way from Rome to Oxford, the editor took the transcript of the MS. to Sir George Warner at the British Museum, to ask his opinion as to the authorship of the MS. From the above-mentioned data he considered that the author might possibly be John Capgrave (1393-1464), who was known to have written a description of Rome. This description had disappeared, with the exception of two fragments which are attached to the binding of two other Capgrave MSS. at Oxford (All Souls and Balliol College Libraries). Sir George Warner then showed the British Museum Capgrave MS. to the editor, who was at once struck with the remarkable similarity of its handwriting to that of the present work. This can be observed by comparing the facsimile of the script of this work with that of the British Museum MS. The latter can be seen in E. E. Text Society, vol. cxi, 1910. On comparing the text of the two fragments (which can be seen in vol. i of the Rolls Series, p. 355) with that of our MS., it was found that the latter was almost an exact copy of portions of chapters XI, XII, and XIII of Part I of this book.¹ There was now no possible doubt that the present work is the lost description of Rome by John Capgrave, and that a literary discovery of considerable importance had been made.

The further examination of the fragments in question, and of other MSS. reputed to be Capgrave's autograph works, was left to the Rev. H. M. Bannister, as the editor felt that he was not qualified for that task. The result of Mr. Bannister's investigations at Oxford, Cambridge, and London, will be found in his Introductory Note.

It now only remains to express the editor's thanks to those who have been good enough to help him, without which assistance he feels that the task would have been one beyond his powers. First and foremost his most grateful thanks are due to his friend, the Rev. H. M. Bannister, who, whenever it was required, has been most kind in giving his guidance and advice. He also wishes to mention his deep sense of the courtesy of the authorities of the Bodleian Library, who have readily granted him every facility for the transcription and publication of the work. Thanks are also due to the Provost of Oriel and to Father Ehrle, Prefect of the Vatican Library, who have kindly permitted the editor to reproduce the miniatures in Oriel MS. 132 and Vatican Cod. Reginen. 1880. Dr. Ashby, of the British School of Rome, has kindly helped with his advice, and permission to reproduce the illustrations of the Carnival on Monte Testaccio and the churches of Rome from old and rare prints in his possession. The editor also wishes to express his obligation to Dr. Ch. Hülsen, and to authors whose works he has made use of, more especially to Professor Arturo Graf and to Mr. F. M. Nichols, a member of the British and American Archaeological Society.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

IN the Preface the editor has shown how the MS. here published was ascertained to be the long-lost work on Rome by John Capgrave. My connexion with it has been confined to: (1) an examination of the MS., with a suggestion as to its date and orthography; (2) advice as to the method of editing it; and (3) an investigation as to whether it can claim to be an actual autograph of the author.

1. The MS. 2322 (Bodley MS. 423), 1 + 416 leaves of parchment and paper, 272 × 197 mm., is a composite volume containing five MSS.,¹ of which the Capgrave is the last; but as the other four came as a donation from Dr. W. Cotton, Bishop of Exeter, in 1605, and were bound together with it by Sir Thomas Bodley's orders, they need not be considered here. It is to be regretted that our MS. was then considerably cut down both in length and breadth to match the other four, hence its marginalia are now incomplete, and the original pagination was so cut away that it had to be refooliated as ff. 355-414. At present it consists of eight quires of eight parchment leaves; the third one lacks its middle four leaves, and the last one has one missing leaf; the rest of the MS. is now lost. It bears on its first page the title 'Stations of Rome' in Bodley's handwriting.

There are no signs of Norfolk provenance in the rest of the volume; the only name added in our MS. is that on f. 387 v of Warner, a common Norfolk name, but there is nothing to show what connexion he had with the MS.

(a) Date of the work. Dr. Furnivall (Early English Text Society, vol. c, p. viii) has suggested that it was at some date after 1422 and before c. 1437, when he settled down to write his Annals, that Capgrave went to Rome and was there in his illness helped by Bishop Grey. These dates, however, are not consistent with the bishop's movements, for his sojourn in Italy was mostly after 1442, and he did not take up his abode in Rome until 1449. This date fits in admirably with that assigned by the editor to our MS., viz. c. 1450.

(b) Orthography. The present MS. adds considerably to our knowledge of the Middle English of the fifteenth century; for an account of this, the reader is referred to the recent editions of two of John Capgrave's other

¹ I am much indebted to Mr. Madan for allowing me to see his copy for the next volume of the Summary Catalogue.

English works in vols. c and cxi of the Early English Text Society, and to the Glossary at the end of vol. i of the Rolls Series. A further notice of Capgrave's English can be seen in John Capgrave und die englische Schriftsprache, a doctor's disputation by William Dibelius, Friedrich-Wilhelms University, Berlin, 1899.

2. I have suggested that the practice of the Early English Text Society should be retained as to the use of the þ and the ȝ, in the typographical reproduction of the final ȝ, H, ð, and ȝ, and in the universal use, as in the MS. of u for v; but as to punctuation I felt that the custom of the MS. should be invariably retained; it may occasionally be defective and misleading, and, to our minds, it is always incomplete, but I think that the small additional effort demanded of the reader is preferable to an arbitrary editorial trampling on the transcription of the text. For the same reason I have not advised that hyphens should be inserted between adverbs and their adjectives, or between two words which are now joined together, such as on to, with in, be for, for the MS. in very few instances lessens in their case the space between the words, and capital letters are not used for such words where only modern custom demands them, unless the text gives some warranty for their use.

The text of the MS. in every case treats the final syllables of words ending in -ion, such as opposition, petition, meditation, religion (cf. Early English Text Society, vol. cxi, p. 61), as written -ioū with contraction mark for n over the u and not as -ion. The u and n of the MS. are practically identical in form; the letter is here written as intended by the scribe, and the example of the Early English Text Society, vol. cxxii, pp. 510, &c., which prints Eueas for Eneas because the second letter looks more like a u than an n, has not been followed. I am aware that in this advice I am departing from the usual modern practice, but the exact transcription of the text appears to me to be of more importance than an attempt to render it more intelligible to some of its readers.

3. The question as to John Capgrave's autograph is more difficult than appears at first sight; it has been seriously compromised by the fact that almost without exception every early MS. of his writings has been called his autograph by recent editors and cataloguers. For convenience of reference these MSS. are here recited:—

The article on John Capgrave in the Dictionary of National Biography applies the term 'autograph' to 1, 5, 8, 10, and perhaps 7. This statement is apparently founded on Preb. Hingeston-Randolph's Introd. to Nos. 1 and 7 in the Rolls Series, vol. vii, pp. li, 124, 183, 211¹, and vol. i, pp. xiii, xvi, xx, xxvi, 356, and is accepted by Dr. Furnivall, Early English Text Society, vol. c (1893), pp. xiii, xiv, xviii, and by Dr. Horstmann, Nova Legenda Angliae (Oxford, 1901), vol. i, p. lxxviii, who includes in the list of autographs No. 11. The Catalogue of Additions to the MSS. in the British Museum, MDCCC—MDCCCXV (1907), p. vii, speaks of No. 2 as 'autograph', and states that 'the hand, both of text and corrections, agrees with that' of No. 8, 'which there seems to be adequate reason for regarding as Capgrave's MS.,' and refers to the Dictionary of National Biography for several other of his works occurring in the same hand. The latest editor of Capgrave, Mr. J. J. Munro, in his Introd. to the Lives of S. Augustine, S. Gilbert, &c. (Early English Text Society, vol. cxi (1910), p. ix), states that No. 2 is in Capgrave's own hand, with his characteristic orthography, and contains the author's corrections in the text.

Mr. E. W. B. Nicholson, Bodley's Librarian, in an insertion in Mr. F. Madan's Summary Catalogue of Western MSS., &c., vol. vi, Pt. I, states that 'The companion Genesis', i.e. No. 5, 'shows that the Exodus' (No. 6) purchased for the Bodleian in January, 1907, 'is in Capgrave's own hand.' Similar conceptions can be seen in K. K. Vickers, Humphrey Duke of Gloucester (London, 1907), 'the original copy is at Oriel'; and Dr. M. R.

James's Descriptive Catalogue of the MSS. in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (1910), p. 378, 'the autograph MS. is Univ. Library, Gg. 4. 12.'

Doubts, however, arose as to the statement in the Introduction to The Chronicle of England, Rolls Series, vol. i, p. 356, that the handwriting of No. 4 (the fragments of the Guide to the Antiquities of Rome) was 'identical with that of the English Chronicle and the other works of John Capgrave, of which we possess the autographs', and Prof. Napier's letter of May 16, 1892 (Early English Text Society, vol. c, p. xxxiv), proved that 'neither the fly-leaves of All Souls' 17 nor the body of that MS. are in the same hand as the Cambridge University MS. of the Chronicle; all three are different'.

Doubts, too, have been expressed as to the validity of the argument founded on the use of the so-called autograph which forms the colophon at the end of several MSS., Feliciter per John Capgrave, and of the trefoil-shaped monogram which is assumed to be the private mark of the author, which either accompanies the colophon or occurs in the margin of some of the MSS.

The present seemed to be an appropriate time to investigate the above statements, and to ascertain, if possible, exactly how many MSS. are John Capgrave's autograph. It has been my privilege to compare at the same time all the MSS. at Oxford, Nos. 3-6, 7, 9, 10, and to examine the two at Cambridge, Nos. 1, 8, and the one at the British Museum, No. 2—in fact all the possible 'autographs' of Capgrave with the exception of No. 11—with the following results:—

(i) The Rome fragments, No. 4, are scarcely (cf. Rolls Series, vol. i, p. 356) 'only first and rough copies', and that this is the cause of the 'universal carelessness of the spelling, and the incompleteness of many of the sentences'. My impression is that these leaves formed part of a late copy which must have been made from dictation, for no other explanation seems to account for the entirely different spelling, e.g. say for sey, siluer for siluyr, conqueste for conqwest, sekernes for sekir nerkis, &c.; a copy which has no words underlined and no initial letters inserted in colour, but was left unfinished and rejected as only fit for fly-leaves of other MSS. No one can take up our present MS. and compare it with the two fragments without being struck by its great superiority and accuracy. (Some of the errors in the fragments as printed in the Rolls Series, No. 7, are due not to the scribe but to the transcriber, who has turned 'christes birth' into 'giftes such', has omitted the word 'puerum' which is necessary for the scansion of a hexameter, and has printed 'exameron' as 'epistolarium'.)

(ii) Feliciter per John Capgrave, which forms the colophon in Nos. 1, 5-7, 9-11, is, judging by the form of the letters a, l, p, the work of at least four or five different scribes; its position varies, for it occurs either as a separate clause, attached to or separate from the text of the corpus libri, or as part of the Incepit, &c., or as Feliciter only. In the presentation copies to Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, and Bishop Grey, Nos. 5-7, which I believe to have been written by professional copyists, these words are undoubtedly by the hand of the copyist. The expression is doubtless derived from the author's colophon in the original copy, as we shall see in the De illustribus Henricis, No. 1, but it was retained and copied more or less exactly by subsequent scribes. Thus Genesis and Exodus, though the work of the same copyist, differ in that the former uses Feliciter only whilst the latter has F. p. J. C. The argument founded on the occurrence of these words has been unduly forced, for they do not bear the interpretation usually assigned to them.

(iii) The trefoil mark occurs in Nos. 1, 5-11, either in black or red; its shape varies considerably, being either with or without a stalk, the shape of which is seldom made in the same way. It is found occasionally in the margins of some MSS., in places which do not seem to have called for special notice, except that it is affixed to the year of the author's birth, to his personal opinion, 'we think that', and to references to the resurrection. It is also used in connexion with, either before or after, the Feliciter per John Capgrave. It used to be called the private monogram of John Capgrave, but recent editors have felt that this is an unsafe argument, e. g. Mr. Munro (Early English Text Society, vol. cxi, p. 10), 'the monogram itself is not infallible, nor is the Feliciter, &c., for both of these were liable to be copied'; and Prof. Napier writes (loc. cit.), 'the sign may have been copied from the exemplar.'

(iv) What authority have such expressions as Incepit . . . hoc opus . . . et fecit finem ejusdem, as found in the Genesis and the Exodus? Do they necessarily refer to the copying of the MS. and not to the composition of the work itself? The use of the third person instead of the first, and of hoc opus instead of hunc librum, though not conclusive, is at least suggestive; I believe that in most cases the original colophon in the author's copy was copied by the transcriber, without any intention of misleading or fear of misapprehension. As a matter of fact, of how many mediaeval authors do we possess the ipsissima scripta? They wrote either rough notes or rough copy, occasionally they made a fair copy, but as a rule this was done by professional scribes, who produced the exemplar which served for others in the same or some other scriptorium. Unless a MS. gives us, either by some expression in the text or by its known handwriting, some evidence to the contrary, no copy of any work should be regarded as written by the author.

(v) Of the ten MSS. examined, three are the work of one scribe, two of another, but the remaining five are due to different copyists. It is true that the dates of the works copied extend from 1438 to 1461, yet, especially in the larger MSS., most of them show signs of a common scriptorium by the ruling of the lines, the underlining in red, and the scroll mark at the end of the quires; one can detect the same illuminators and the same revisers, but the writing itself varies considerably, being either an ecclesiastical script (preferred for the Latin MSS.), occasionally badly formed, or the usual English script of the fifteenth century; in the case of the Genesis, Exodus, and Acts both are employed.

(vi) The same scribe probably copied Nos. 5 and 6, the Genesis and Exodus; both MSS. have for the Bible text a larger script than that employed for the Expositio, and at first sight the hands seem dissimilar (cf. especially No. 6, f. 75 r), but there is no reason why difference of parchment, of pen, and of ink may not account for this. Hence, though a second scribe is suggested by the different position of the Feliciter and by the varying words of the Incepit, &c., I attribute to the same trained copyist both these presentation copies to Duke Humphrey.

(vii) There is one MS., however, which is undoubtedly the autograph of John Capgrave: No. 1, the De illustribus Henricis at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. At pp. 135, 138, where the author gives the title and incipit of certain works which he had seen, he uses a thicker pen or darker ink in order to make these incipit more prominent; but for the last example his memory failed him, and he inserted later on, in a third quality of ink,¹ 'iam non recordor quoniam ad manus non est.' There is no change whatever in the handwriting. This proof of autograph seems decisive and unanswerable; no one but Capgrave himself could have inserted these words. ('The English words on p. 108, 'make no space but writh forth INVOCATO' (see Rolls Series, vol. vii, p. 11), a direction for some future copyist, may be and in fact seem to be the work of a subsequent reviser, but the 'corrigere librum quia erronee scribitur' on p. 83 is apparently by the author.)

With this MS. before us, we are able to point out two others which by the rules of their Libraries cannot be compared side by side, but which a careful examination of each letter proves to be by Capgrave himself. These are:

(a) No. 2. British Museum, Add. MS. 36704, which the Catalogue rightly calls 'autograph', but it unfortunately quotes as a similar hand No. 8, the Cambridge University copy of The Chronicle; the alphabet, however, of this

¹ Similar change of quality of ink can be seen on pp. 93-95; the MS. clearly was not all written at one time; cf. pp. 95, 111.

MS. in at least eight letters, a, b, d, h, k, l, m, w, is entirely different. This can be seen by a comparison of the facsimiles in Early English Text Society, vol. cxi, and in the Rolls Series, vol. i.

No. 2 bears some evidence on the fly-leaf, f. 3 r, as to the author: 'Magister Iohannes Capgrave conuentus linn fecit istum librum ex precepto unius generose.' The expression facere librum (not opus) seems to refer to the writing of the MS.; hence, with the palaeographical evidence before me, I share the opinion of Mr. Munro, who apparently had not seen the Corpus MS., that No. 2 is a holograph of Capgrave's.

(b) The MS. now edited. A comparison of the colotype of f. 387r of this MS., here printed, with that of No. 2 (Early English Text Society, vol. cxi) leaves no doubt as to their both having been written by the same man; the words augustinus (augustyn), ordre (order), titiled (entytled), seynt, frer, and wech occur on both facsimiles; the words 'concordia' and 'ye 3ere of our lord a mccccxij' of our colotype can be seen on ff. 116, 117 of the British Museum MS. It appears to me that the identity is indisputable.

(viii) Judging by Dr. Furnivall's account (Early English Text Society, vol. c, pp. xlv, xlvi), the MS. at Cheltenham would appear to be an autograph.

(ix) There is, however, another source of evidence open to us: the script of contemporary or early revisers of the text. Did John Capgrave correct any of the MSS. which he did not write himself, and if he did, may not his autograph appear in the margins or between the lines of their text? One would naturally expect corrections by the author of a presentation copy of any of his works, in order that the accuracy of the copy should be guaranteed, but in the MSS. before us each one without exception bears some witness in this sense (later additions do not concern us), and the writing of at least three or four revisers can be made out.

Taking them in order and summarizing my notes, I find that—

No. 1. In almost every page Capgrave has inserted words above the line with a red sign (∧) below, and in the margins; I see no trace of any other reviser.

No. 2. Nearly all the corrections are due to the scribe himself.

No. 3. The text has frequently been altered by erasures or by a red deleting line, without any advisory indications in the margin. This is what one would expect if the author were personally revising his own writing.

No. 4 was left in its imperfect state.

Nos. 5 and 6. Both MSS. were carefully looked over by some one who inserted in red (in the margin and between the lines of the text) words which were to be altered or inserted; where the words erroneously written in the text were so many that an erasure was impossible, va . . . cat is written at their beginning and end. These temporary readings were almost always erased as soon as they had served their purpose and the original scribe had inserted them in the text. These corrections are naturally fewer in the Exodus than in the Genesis. To Capgrave may possibly be ascribed the words 'contra sacerdotes terrarios' (!) in the Genesis, chapter 45—they are not a correction of the text, but are apparently the expression of the author calling attention to its purport.

No. 7 has very few alterations, all apparently by the first hand—the 'in ydiomate' in the margin of Acts, chapter 21, is preceded by the red line and point (1.) which occurs five times in our MS.

No. 8 has been carefully revised by the original scribe.

No. 9. Capgrave's hand is probably to be seen in the margins of ff. 5 v, 49 v, 111 r (in the latter page the red 1. appears); the other few corrections are either by the original scribe, or by the reviser of the All Souls MS.

No. 10. On pp. 175, 204 I detect the hand of Capgrave, and I note that the reviser of No. 9 also exercised his office on this MS.; a reference to the Book of Judges occurs by the same hand in All Souls, pp. 2, 77, and in Balliol 190, ff. 4 v, 42 r; 'iste sermo' &c., All Souls, p. 60, is by the scribe who wrote 'idem sermo est' in Balliol 190, f. 33 r, but the 'Iterum Simbolum hugonis' of p. 4 is, as in No. 9, apparently by Capgrave.

But a discussion of such details would lead us too far; they are only a corollary to the evidence that we have produced as to the autograph of Capgrave being found in three MSS.: C.C.C. Camb. 408, B.M. Add. MS. 36704, and in the volume now under examination—but in the text of no other MS.

² Sir Thomas Tudenham was 18 years old in 1417; married Alice, daughter of John Wodehouse, before he was of age; had no issue; obtained a divorce Nov. 22, 1436; and was beheaded on Tower Hill on Feb. 22, 1461, together with John, Earl of Oxford, the Earl's son Aubrey, John Montgomery, and William Tyrrell, for corresponding with Margaret of Anjou, wife of Henry VI. He was Lord of the Manor of Oxburgh, in the NW. part of the County of Norfolk, not far from King's Lynn. There were three houses of Austin friars in the county, one at Norwich, one at Thetford, and one at King's Lynn (Blomefield, Norfolk, vol. vi, p. 174, n. 4, p. 175).

² The legend of Noah having died at Rome is very fully discussed in A. Graf's Roma nella memoria e nell'immaginazione del Medio Evo, a book which will be much quoted in part i of this chronicle. From note 15, pp. 85-6, vol. i, of the same, it would appear that near the well-known Colonnacce, in the forum of Nerva, there was an arch, known before the fifteenth century as the 'arch of Noah', probably a corruption of arcus Nervæ (Graf, Roma nella memoria, &c., vol. i, pp. 80-91; Nichols, Marvels of Rome, part i, ch. i, p. 2, n. 3). For another account of the Arco di Noe, and the Arco di Oro or Aureo, and the origins of these names, cf. Adinolfi, vol. ii, pp. 58-9, and pp. 63-4.

² Brunetto Latini (born at Florence 1230, died 1294), on p. 43 of Li Livres dou Tresor (Paris, 1863), says: 'Cil Numitor en fu rois après la mort de son pere, et avoit une fille qui avoit à non Emilia; mais Amulio li toli son regne, et chaca Numitorem et sa fille en essil, et il

² This passage is interesting as showing the different methods of cultivation in use at this period in Italy and in England. It would seem that, in Italy, the earth was worked with two-pronged forks, whereas spade cultivation was more in vogue in our country. But the forks appear from the text to have served the purpose of a harrow or rake; as the author, in truth, calls them.

² 'stroom' in margin of MS.

³ This stream, now called the Mariana or Marrana, is fully described by Adinolfi. Our chronicler is mistaken in supposing that it fell into the Tiber near S. Maria del Popolo. He should have said S. Maria in Cosmedin. It is mentioned by Cicero, and was formerly called the Aqua Crabra or Dannata (Adinolfi, vol. i, p. 156).

⁴ The derivation of the word Lateran from lateo-rana seems to have been universal in the Middle Ages. Giacomo di Voragine, in De sancto Petro Apostolo, c. lxxxix, tells the same story, concluding thus: 'Unde et pars illa civitatis ut aliqui dicunt, ubi rana latuerat, Lateranensis nomen accepit.' Enekel (Weltbuch) says: 'Nerone chiama a se settanta due medici, e fa intendere loro il suo desiderio. Questi da prima si seusano, ma, minacciati di morte, e rinchiusi in un carcere, ricorrono all' espediente del beveraggio e della rana, poi, liberati e largamente premiati, se ne fuggono. La gravidanza facendosi assai tormentosa, Nerone chiama altri medici, e con l'ajuto dell' arte loro vomita il mal concepito figliuolo, al quale tosto provvede una nutrice perchè lo allevi, e dà per compagni i figliuoli di tutti i principi che si trovano in Roma. Allora i padri si ribellano, segue una gran battaglia, e Nerone, vinto, si fa uccidere da uno de' suoi capitani. 'Hanc tamen ranam Nero fecit in turri quadam custodiri usque ad obitum suum, unde putant quidam locum illum a rana ibi latente lateranam appellari' (R. Higden, Polychronicon, vol. iv, p. 396).

² Here our author makes a mistake in his topography, as the Via Ardeatina of course did not start from the Porta Maggiore.

³ 'Das ist peym thor darunter' (S. Vito e Modesto) 'die schlüssel von der Tyber pruck hangen, die von Tiberi die tur nicht hinein geen Rom geen den' (als) 'durch dasselb thor.' This passage is from the chronicle of Niklaus Muffel (p. 54), who was a man of good family and fortune, a citizen of Nürnberg, of which place he was town-councillor at the age of twenty-two. He was sent to Rome on the occasion of Frederick III's coronation; and on p. 5 of his book he says: 'und die kronung des keyseris geschach am Sontag Letare in der vasten anne 1452 iar.' His visit to Rome coincided almost exactly with that of our chronicler; and as he will be quoted frequently, it will be sufficient to note his name, and the page of his work, which appeared in the proceedings of the Litterarischer Verein, Stuttgart, cxxviii—1875-6, herausgegeben von Wilhelm Vogt. Adinolfi says in one passage: 'Dal mezzo della curvatura dell' arco intitolato da M. Aurelio Vittore a Gallieno e Salonina, ossia dalla chiave, fino agli ultimi tempi pendea appiccata una catena colle chiavi che Giuliano Giamberti, architetto, in numero di quattro figurò ne' suoi disegni, tolte da' Romani ai Viterbesi in un combattimento che ebbero con cotestoro, dalla porta di Viterbo detta della Salciccia' (Adinolfi, vol. ii, p. 229).

² The church of S. Agnes is believed to have been founded by Constantine in 324. It was enlarged by Symmachus (498-514), rebuilt by Honorius I (625-40), altered and restored in the fifteenth and nineteenth centuries. The church of S. Costanza was also built by Constantine, over his daughter's tomb (Marucchi, p. 468; Armellini, p. 672; Nibby, p. 43).

⁴ 'maria' in margin of MS.

¹ Our author appears to have fallen into an error here, as he is confusing the Porta Collatina with the Porta Collina, which latter was near the Castel S. Angelo. Its position is mentioned in the Ordo Romanus. It appears to have closed the bridge, opposite the Castel S. Angelo, from the Leonine city (Nichols, Marvels of Rome, p. 168, n. 392). Adinolfi calls this gate the Porta di S. Pietro in Adriano, and adds: 'Fù appellata eziandio Porta Collina senza aver riguardo a questi edifizii' (S. Peter's and the Vatican), 'ma solo ai colli Vaticani. Fù una delle due porte Aurelie, secondo quel che disse Procopio, e dall' essere di bronzo corrottamente veniva chiamata dello Brunoso, cioè brunoso' (Adinolfi, vol. i, p. 133). ¹ This may refer to Cn. Naevius, the poet, whose works have almost entirely disappeared, but who would seem to have been much appreciated by his contemporaries and his successors. Ennius and Vergil copied him; Plautus, Terence, Cicero, and Horace admired him, and praise him.

¹ It is difficult to understand this passage, when it is compared with the previous one, which refers to the church of S. Sabina. As a rule, our author is very accurate in his topography, but here he would seem to have fallen into an error. The present church of S. Alexis was, in ancient times, dedicated to S. Boniface; it was probably founded in the fourth century. It was built in the palace of Eufermianus (father of S. Alexis) on the Aventine, and in the tenth century a Greco-Latin monastery was attached thereto; it was then dedicated to the two saints. In time the name of S. Boniface dropped out, and the title, which at first was named after that saint, now bears the name of S. Alexis only. Possibly there may originally have been two separate churches, which were united in the tenth century, but it is quite certain that the church of S. Boniface (or S. Alexis), the palace of Eufermian, and the church of S. Sabina were all close together on the Aventine. It is difficult to say what hill our author may mean by mons canalis. He may be thinking of the hill generally known as the Pseudo-Aventine, on which the church of S. Saba stands. On the other hand, he may mean the spur running down from the Collegio of S. Anselmo towards the Porta S. Paolo, and along which the Via del Priorato descends to the plain. On referring to De Rossi's Piante iconografiche di Roma, it is curious to find that although S. Alexis and S. Sabina are shown in their correct relative positions in Plate No. IV, in a later Plate (the large one in sections at the end of the work) S. Sabina is shown furthest to the east, and S. Alexis near to S. Saba (Plates VIII and IX). The following occurs in a MS. in the Bodleian Library:—

‘ Montes infra urbem sunt isti.
 Ianiculus qui dicitur ianuaris ad S. Salavam.
 Mons cavalleus ad S. Alexium.

² 'was' in margin of MS.

³ The chronicler is referring to the church of S. Celso e Giuliano, which is a very ancient parish church in the Via dei Banchi, near the Bridge of S. Angelo. In the twelfth century it was one of the most important churches in Rome. Julius II pulled it down partly, in order to increase the width of the street, and reduced it much in size. Under Clement XII it was demolished, and rebuilt in its present form. Even as late as 1625 the parish would appear to have been considered one of the most important in the city (Armellini, p. 184; Nibby, p. 166). The golden arch of Alexander appears to have fallen down in the reign of Urban V (cf. Nichols, Marvels of Rome, p. 10; Urlichs, Codex Topog. Anonymus Magliabecchianus, pp. 153 and 163, which gives the position of S. Ursus as near S. Celsus).

⁴ The church of S. Bibiana was founded about 467 by Pope Simplicius, near the palatium Licinianum. It was originally called Olympina, after a pious matron, who provided the funds for constructing it. A nunnery was attached to the church, and the name of the street in which it stood was ursus pileatus. Honorius III restored it in 1220, and the church was entirely altered by Urban VIII. In ancient times there was a statue of a hatted bear there (Adinolfi, vol. i, p. 281; Armellini, p. 167; Marucchi, p. 344; Nibby, p. 134; Stadler's Heiligenlexikon, vol. i, p. 479).

² At the time our chronicler wrote hardly anything was known about the Catacombs. Their rediscoverer was Antonio Bosio, who was born about 1576 in Malta. He began his life's work in 1593, and devoted thirty-six years to their study. De Rossi very justly calls him (in the Introduction to his great work) the Columbus of underground Rome (Roma Sotterranea, p. 26 sq.). De Rossi also mentions the work of the Belgian scholar Philip van Wingham, who lived in Rome for two years. In 1590 he had already discovered the Catacombs of Priscilla, but he died young. Bosio carried on the work he had begun; and ultimately, when he published his own book, Roma Sotterranea, included in it some maps which had been drawn by Van Wingham (cf. Orbaan, Sixtine Rome, London, 1911, p. 276). For early accounts of the Catacombs see Nichols, Marvels of Rome, pp. 26-9; Urlichs, Cod. Topog., pp. 95, 118, 130.

² The position of the place in tellure, so often mentioned in this MS., is approximately fixed by the following passage: 'Anche dove se chiama anchoi chanapara fo il tēpio di Cerere & di telure le q̄le dee secōdo la opiniōe de li romāi sono la terra cioe adire el tēpio della terra' (Edifichazion di molti palazzi, Venice, 1480, p. A ii v). It must not, however, be confused with the temple of Tellus in the Suburra, in Carinis (see n. 69, p. 31, Nichols, Marvels of Rome, and n. 78, p. 33). 'Item dagegen' (templum Concordiae) 'ist gewesen templum telluris, das ist der got des ertrichs, des man nichtz sicht, nu heist mans zu sand Salvator in Tellumine' (Jordan, ii. 483), 'und fur tellure sprechen sy tellumine. ³ Compare with Nichols, Marvels of Rome, pp. 29-34; Urlichs, Cod. Topog., p. 94.

(Latinized form aguglia), according to Graf. But in the Middle Ages it was believed that the name was a corruption of Julia, and Gervase of Tilbury calls it Julia Petra (cf. Graf, Roma nella memoria, &c., vol. i, p. 288). Ranulf Higden says: 'Hanc autem Pyramidem super quatuor leones fundatam peregrini mendosi acum beati Petri appellant, mentiunturque illum fore mundum a peccatis qui sub saxo illo liberius potuerit repere' (Higden, Polychronicon, ed. Babington, London, 1865, vol. i, p. 226). 'Presso a sancto Pietro dove mo se dice la gulgia dove e una cholona quadra grandissima come una tore, & di sopra & la zenere dil chorpo di zessare' (Edifichazion di molti palazzi, Venice, 1480, p. B iv). In De Rossi's Piante iconografiche di Roma the obelisk is shown in Plate No. I, and the term acus (= needle) is used to describe it. De Rossi says, in the text, that he considers this use of the word to be 'singolare'. In the large plan, at the end of De Rossi's work, it is called 'La Guglia', and it is shown as an obelisk with a ball at the top. It is also shown thus in Plate No. IV.

Sic lapis est unus, dic qua fuit arte levatus :
Si lapides plures, dic ubi contigui'

(Higden, Polychronicon, vol. i, p. 226).

And again :

'Item in columna Iulia quae nunc a peregrinis acus Petri dicitur, ubi pulvis combusti corporis Iulii ponebatur, sic erat metrica scriptum :

Tantus Caesar eras quantus et orbis.
Sed nunc in modica clauderis urna.'

(Higden, Polychronicon, book iii, vol. iv, p. 210).

Thus rendered by John Trevisa :

'þou were grete, Cesar, as al þe world is at ene
And art now sette þere i-closed in a litel stene'

Here is another version :

'Mira sepultura stat Caesaris alta columpna,
Regia structura, que rite vocatur Agula,
Aurea concha patet, qua cinis ipse iacet'

(Mon. Germ. Hist. Script. xxii. 67 ; Gotfredi Viterbiensis, Speculum Regum, vv. 837-9).

And another :

'As man dat unden an eyne steyne gehauwen vindt myt desen nae gescreuen versen
Cesar tantus erat quo nullus maior in urbe,
Sed in modico nunc tam magnus clauditur antro.
Intra scriptura stat Caesaris alta columpna

² There are several theological writers named Isidore; but the writer, who in another passage speaks of him as a 'bishop of Spain', appears to be referring to Isidore, Bishop of Seville. He is generally called S. Isidore the younger, so as to distinguish him from S. Isidore, Bishop of Cordova. S. Isidore the younger was the son of Severian, Governor of Cartagena, and Theodora; he flourished in the seventh century, and died in the year 636. S. Isidore the elder lived in the reign of Honorius and Theodosius the younger (Moréri, Dictionnaire historique).

⁴ For an early account of the Capitol see Nichols, Marvels of Rome, pp. 86-90; Urlichs, Cod. Topog., p. 120.

² The following passage in Nichols's translation of the Mirabilia is interesting, and comes in at this point of the legend: 'Therefore he made them the memorial that he had promised, to wit, the naked horses, which trample on the earth, that is upon the mighty princes of the world that rule over the men of this world; and there shall come a full mighty king, which shall mount the horses, that is, upon the might of the princes of this world. Meanwhile there be the two men half naked, which stand by the horses, and with arms raised on high and bent fingers tell the things that are to be; and as they be naked, so is all worldly knowledge naked, and open to their minds' (Nichols, Marvels of Rome, pp. 40-41). ¹ This legend was a favourite one in the Middle Ages, as will be seen from the following references: Edifichazion di molti palazzi, Venice, 1480, p. B vi; Solinus, De memorabilibus mundi, Venice, 1491, p. g ii. He speaks 'de rustico sedente super equum ereum' (Ritter von Harff, Pilgerfahrt in den Jahren 1496-9, pp. 15-16; von Groote, Cöln, 1860). He says: 'Item hie bij vur der kirchen saegen wir eynen groissen metaellen man off eynem metaellen perde sitȝen,' &c. In the Descriptio plenaria of the Mirabilia we read: 'Laterani est quidam caballus aureus qui dicitur Constantini sed non est ita,' &c. (Urlichs, Cod. Topog., pp. 98, 99). Graf thinks that the owl on the head of the horse was only the plaited forelock of hair between the ears of the animal, and that the figure of the bound dwarf king, now no longer to be found, represented some subdued people (Roma nella memoria, &c., vol. ii, pp. 113-115). Rucellai, a Florentine pilgrim of 1450, says that the hero of the legend was a 'villano o vero uno pastore che guardava bestie' (Il Giubileo dell' anno santo, Archivio St. Pat., 1881, vol. iv, fasc. iv, p. 571). But Higden's account differs so much from all the others that it is interesting enough to quote in full. At vol. i, p. 228, the Latin text begins: 'Est et aliud signum', and the translation in the Harleian MS. 2261 is as follows: 'Also there was an other signe a fore the palice of the pope, whiche is a horse made of brasse, and the sitter on hit as spekenge to the peple by the signe of the riȝhte honde, and governenge the horse as with the lyfte honde, havenge a brydde callede a cuckowe made betwene the eeres of the horse, and Nanus lyke to dye under his feete, whom pilgremes calle Theodoricus, the commune peple Constantyne, but clerkes of the cowrte calle hit Marcus or Quintus Curtius. That signe stode somme tyme on iiii pyllers of brasse a fore the awter of Iupiter in the Capitoly or chiefe place of Rome. But Seynte Gregory put downe the horse man and that horse, and putte the pillars in the chirche Lateranense. The Romanes toke the horse man and the horse and sette hit before the palyce of the pope. Men challenge hyt Marcus assigne this cause. A man callede Nanus, erudite in the arte of nigromancy, which subduenge to hym mony kynges and realmes wente to the Romanes, takenge a weye from theyme the vertu of smytenge and kyllenge (virtutem ferendi) segede theyme longe schutte with in the cite. This Nanus wente from his felowschippe erly in the mornenge afore the rysenge of the sonne, and put his arte in exercise; whiche thyng perceyvede, the Romanes made promise to Marcus, a noble knyȝhte, that he scholde have predomyne of the cite and a perpetuelle memory if he cowthe delyuer that cite. Marcus pereschenge the walle of the cite on that parte where Nanus usede the arte of nigromancy goenge furthe on the nyȝhte taryede for Nanus untylle the morowe, whom a brydde callede a cuckowe schewede by here voyce; whiche takenge him brouȝhte hym in to the cite, whiche fallenge downe amonge the feete of the horses supposede to have delyverede hym by his arte; wherfore Marcus had that memorialle. Men that calle hit Quintus assigne this reason, seyenge that there was a place open in the myddes of the cite pereschenge mony men as with a brethe of sulphure, an answeere ȝiffen to the peple that hit wolde not be schutte untylle a man felle in to hit voluntarily. Then Quintus armenge hym felle in to hit to delyuer the cite; that doen, a cucko did flye owte from that pytte, and the erthe was closed anon' (R. Higden, Polychronicon, vol. i, p. 228).

³ There are three writers of this name. The first is S. Papias, Bishop of Hierapolis, a disciple of S. John Evangelist; or, according to Eusebius, of S. John of Ephesus. He wrote five books, entitled The Explanacion of the Discourses of our Lord; only some fragments remain. Papias No. 2 was of Alexandria, and lived in the fourth century. He wrote on Mathematics in the time of Theodosius the Great. Two of the eight books which he wrote have been lost; the remainder were published in Latin at Pesaro. Papias No. 3 was the author of a book called the Elementarium doctrinae rudimentum. His date is uncertain; but a manuscript of his book is believed to have existed in 1173. His work, a glossary, was published in Venice in 1496 (Moreri, Dictionnaire historique).

¹ After describing the statue of Marcus Aurelius as standing before the Lateran, Muffel describes this head and hand of the Colossus as being in the same place. The former, he says, was popularly known as 'septimo sephero'; of the latter he remarks: 'und nit fern davon do stet ein grosz ern' (ehern) 'haubt von einem aptgot, das ist grosser dan ein saltz scheid und dopey die hant desselben aptgotz, hat ein maiestat apfel in yr begriffen, gar wercklich gemacht' (Muffel, p. 14). 'Item in sulla piazza in sur un pezo di colonna una testa di giogante di bronzo e uno braccio con una palla di bronzo' (Rucellai, Il Giubileo dell' anno 1450, Arch. St. Pat., 1881, vol. iv, fasc. iv, p. 572). Solinus in his description says that St. Sylvester, after destroying the figure of Apollo, 'Caput vero et manus dicti idoli cum pomo ad palacium in laterano fecit poni in memoriam; quae palma & caput Samsonis falso vocatur a vulgo' (De mirabilibus mundi, Venice, 1491, p. G ii v). The following passage occurs after a description of the 'Colixium': 'acō da poi el dō sō bonifatio papa el chapo e lamano desso idolo fece ponere per memoria alla ecclesia di sancto ihoanne laterano. & chussi ene āchoi de mettalo & dichono li grossi homeni che la e la testa & la mano di sampsona ma non e vero come o dō & lavanzo de esso idollo disperso qua & la per roma' (Edifichazion di molti palazzi, Venice, 1480, p. A iii v. Compare Urlichs, Cod. Topog., p. 136). In Plate No. I of De Rossi's Piante iconografiche di Roma it will be noted that the head and hand of the Colossus are shown close to the Sancta Sanctorum of the Lateran, and that the statue is also there. In subsequent plates the head and hand are no longer shown; but the statue appears as late as Plate VIII, when the following words are written (in another hand to the engraver's) on the plate: 'Haec enea equestris statua M. Aurelii Antonini Severi aut Septimii Severi, nunc posita capitolio.' It is also noteworthy that Coliseus is spelt so in Plate I, and that in Plate II the building is covered with a cupola, which very likely refers to the legendary description of the heavenly spheres given in our MS. The colossal head of Domitian (then believed to be either that of Commodus or of Nero) was removed from the Lateran Palace, together with the hand holding an orb (popularly known as the palla Samsonis), by Sixtus IV in 1471, and taken across to the Capitol. They found

² 'Giacomo da Voragine racconta nella Legenda aurea (ed. del Grässe, cap. clxii, p. 157) una storia assai appropriata al concetto che nel medio evo si ebbe della ricchezza dei Romani. Quando a Roma si prese a costruire il Pantheon, di forma rotonda per significare l'eternità degli dei, si vide che stante l'ampiezza del giro non sarebbe stato possibile di alzare, con gli aiuti ordinari, la testudine, ossia la cupola. Allora si pensò di riempire di terra, mescolata con denari, tutto il vano dell'edificio mano mano che le mura crescevano sopra suolo. A questo modo si potè compiere agevolmente l'opera e compiuto che fù, si diede licenza a chiunque volesse trar fuori di quella terra di appropriarsi le monete che vi avrebbe trovato. Accorse gran moltitudine di gente, e in poco d'ora fu votato il tempio' (Graf, Roma nella memoria, &c., vol. i, p. 180). In Vasari's Life of Filippo Brunelleschi a similar proposal was made at the time of the celebrated discussion as to how the dome of the cathedral at Florence was to be built. He says: 'E non mancò che dicesse che sarebbe stato bene empierla di terra e mescolare quattrini fra essa, acciochè, volta, dessino licenza che chi voleva di quel terreno potesse andar per esso, e così in un subito il popolo lo portasse via senza spesa' (Giorgio Vasari, Le vite de' più eccellenti pittori, scultori e architetti).

¹ In the Middle Ages it was believed that Augustus had adored the infant Christ, and that Tiberius, Titus, and Vespasian had received baptism. Eusebius, S. Jerome, and Orosius all believed that Philip was a Christian. This was also believed by Baronius and l'Huet, but disputed by Pagi (see Graf, vol. ii, n. 45, p. 75). It is stated that Alexander Severus was not only a Christian, but that he also endowed the Church liberally (see Godfrey of Viterbo, Speculum regum, v. 1026-31). Giacomo Malvezzi says that during the reign of Philip, the most Christian Emperor, the church of S. Peter in Brescia was dedicated (Chronicon, dist. iii, C. 5). See also Urlichs, Cod. Topog., pp. 101-3, which gives a long account of Philip; Graf, Roma nella memoria, &c., vol. ii, p. 75.

Luminis hanc almam matris qui scandis ad aulam :

¹ The church of S. Maria in Ara Celi was founded about the fifth century near the Temple of Juno on the Capitol. Its old name was S. Maria in Capitolio, and it became known by its present one about the fourteenth century. The convent is mentioned in the year 882; in 1250 Innocent IV gave it to the Franciscan Order; previous to this date it had been held by Benedictines. It was reconstructed by Paul III, who connected it with the Palazzo Venezia by means of a covered way (only recently destroyed), along the Via della Pedacchia and the Via della Ripresa. The tower of Paul III and a great part of the convent have been destroyed to make room for the monument to Victor Emanuel (Armellini, p. 376; Marucchi, p. 258; Nibby, p. 341). Our chronicler must have counted these steps. At present there are 124. Alterations in the Piazza below them will account in all probability for the other four. The following note is interesting: 'Und vor derselben kirchen pey dem Capitolium do stet ein nodel darauf ist ein gulder knopf, do liegt Octavianus in begraben . . . un des sind in dem Capitolio in die zurstortten maur zwifeltig pogen in das neu gepey gemacht, izunt leckt' (legt) 'man das gemein saltz hin und in den geschriben ist mit sehr gar alten puchstaben und die das saltz nahet auszgessen hat; noch ein grab darein Gaius Publius und sein erben darein gelegt worden, das do dy rathherrn und das volk schuffen von ir ere und tugend wegen' (Muffel, p. 52).

² There would appear to be some confusion in the author's mind here, and he is not certain which is the 'tower' of Augustus; the tower by the gate, or the Mausoleum (now the Augusteo). On referring to De Rossi's Piante iconografiche di Roma, it will be seen, in Plate IV, that the mausoleum and the tower by the gate are both marked; and, in the large plate (in sections) at the end of the book, the latter is called the 'torre dove stete gran tempo il spirito di Nerone'.

³ 'Ad portam flaminiam fecit Octavianus quoddam castellum quod vocatur Augustum, ubi sepelirentur imperatores, quod tabulatum fuit diversis lapidibus. Intus in girum est concavum per occultas vias. In inferiori giro sunt sepulturae imperatorum; in unaquaque sepultura sunt litterae ita dicentes: haec sunt ossa et cinis Nervae imperatoris, et victoria quam fecit; ante quas stabat statua dei sui, sicut in aliis omnibus sepulcris. In medio sepulcrorum est absidia ubi sedebat Octavianus; ibique erant sacerdotes facientes suas querimonias. De omnibus regnis totius orbis iussit venire unam cirothecam plenam de terra quam posuit super templum, ut esset in memoriam omnibus gentibus Romam venientibus' (see chapter xxiv of this part and note; Urlichs, Cod. Topog., pp. 106-7; Nichols, Marvels of Rome, pp. 80-1). There is a short description of the Mausoleum Augusti in Häutle's account of the embassy of Johann Gottfried von Aschhausen, Prince Bishop of Bamberg, who visited Rome in 1612-13. It is particularly interesting, because he says that he saw the statue of Augustus and that of Agrippina the mother of Nero in the building itself (Litterarischer Verein, Stuttgart, 1881, p. 195 et seq.).

² The author appears never to have seen this monument, but it is shown in Plate III of De Rossi's Piante iconografiche, and would seem to have been close to the churches of S. Sabina and S. Alexis.

³ The Martin here referred to is probably Martinus Polonus, who was a native of Poland, although some authorities say that he was a Scotsman and others a Frenchman. He was of the Order of S. Dominic, and was penitentiary to John XXI and Nicholas III. The latter nominated him Archbishop of Gnesen in Poland; but, before he could take possession of his charge, he died at Bologna, on June 27, 1278. He wrote a chronicle which was afterwards continued on to 1320, which led to the belief that he lived up to that date. But this must have been the work of a later writer, for Martin himself says, in the preface to his work: 'Ego F. Martinus domini papae poenitentiarius & capellanus, ex diversis chronicis & gestis summorum pontificum & imperatorum, praesens opusculum usque ad Iohannem XXI papam deduxi inclusive.' John XXI died in 1277 (Moreri, Dictionnaire historique, Paris, 1732).

² 'dom', Norw. dialect = deeming, judgement.

² Dr. Hülsen has very kindly furnished the following note: 'The word "arvagia" must be a corruption of Almachia, and the author must have had a guide-book similar to the Anonymus Magliabecchianus, who begins his description of the Vatican territory with the words (Urlichs, Cod. Topog., p. 161; Jordan, Topographie, ii, 626): "in Almachia, id est iuxta S. Mariam Transpontinam, est meta, quae ut dicitur fuit sepulcrum Romuli". It was easy to invent the etymology from "arvum", but I find no other mention of it. The name Almachia itself is a corruption from Naumachia (see my dissertation Il Gaianum e la Naumachia, p. 24). The "great hill made of stone" is the Meta Romuli itself; it was believed by some authors that Pope Donus (676-8) took away the marble decorations when "atrium ecclesiae S. Petri qui est ante ecclesiam in quadriporticum magnis marmoribus stravit". See Duchesne's note to the life of Donus in the Liber Pontificalis. Muffel thinks that the shape of the tombs (pyramidal) was made so "in der meynung das kein hunt auf yr grab kummen soll". He also calls the bridge of S. Angelo the "donerpruck", saying: "die ander nodel stet pey der Tyber prucken die toner prucken genant, die ein keyser fur das wetter machen liess, dem geweissagt was, das er vom weter erschlagen solt werden, und die hat ein loch oder spelunk; do ging er eins tags, do es ser heytter und schon am hymel was unter das loch; von stund an erschlug in das wetter" (Muffel, Michaeli's edition, in Römische Mittheilungen, 1888, p. 260, n. *).'

² 'La seguente Dominica (Quinquagesima) si ragunavano in Campidoglio i più nobili cittadini tutti adornati di ricche e preziosi vesti, e di là tutti insieme partivansi in pompa prendendo la via di Testaccio, ordinati nel modo seguente. Ogni Rione aveva il suo carro trionfale colla sua insegna tirato da quattro bianchi cavalli e seguito da dieci giovani giuocatori montati sopra cavalli riccamente bardati, e cadauno di essi, i quali erano de' più ricchi e nobili cittadini, accompagnato era di sei staffieri, riccamente vestiti con uniformi livree. Il Rione di Trastevere andava innanzi e seguivano così per ordine tutti gli altri. Appresso i giuocatori venivano i Capo-Rioni con dieci staffieri per ciascuno con preziose vesti e preceduti da tamburri e trombette. Seguivangli i Maestri Giustizieri, i Riformatori dello studio, i due Giudici del Senatore, il Capitano dell'appellazione, ed il putto della Giustizia. Ne venivano di poi i due Cancellieri del popolo, i Conservatori ed il Senatore, i quali accompagnavano trecento soldati a piedi col loro capitano a cavallo. Chiudevano finalmente la pompa una folla di gentiluomini Romani e Forestieri tutti a cavallo riccamente addobbati di scarlatto e ganzo di oro. Gionta questa pompa trionfale nel Prato di Testaccio, lasciavansi dal monte tredici carri tirati dai tori, in ciascuno de' quali erano legati quattro porci, e vi s'innalzava un' asta dalla quale pendea una canna di drappo rosato. Appena giungevano i carri nel piano che quei diversi giuocatori di rione sguainate le spade vi correvano sopra per rapire i porci ed il drappo; ed urtandosi e combattendo tra loro, era questa una vera battaglia nella quale restavan feriti non pochi ed alcuna volta anche morti. ¹ S. Prosper of Aquitaine or Guienne was the secretary of Pope S. Leo. He is said by some to have been Bishop of Reggio; by others, of Riez in Provence. He died a little after 455, and was buried at Riez, in a church which he had built and consecrated to S. Apollinaris. What remains of his works has been published at Lyon in 1539, at Louvain in 1566, at Douai in 1577, at Cologne in 1609 and 1630, and at Paris in 1711. The last is said by Moreri to be the best edition (Moreri, Dictionnaire historique).

¹ Hugo de S. Victor, a celebrated theologian, and Prior of S. Victor in Paris, devoted himself to a religious life at the age of eighteen, in the year 1115. He died in 1142. He taught theology from the year 1130 with such success that he was called the 'second Augustine'. His works have been published at Paris in 1526, at Venice in 1588, at Mainz in 1617, and at Rouen in 1648 (Moreri, Dictionnaire historique).

¹ The Basilica of S. Peter, according to tradition, is over an oratory built by Pope Anacletus to mark the site of the Apostle's tomb. The original basilica was founded by Constantine in 306, and rests in part upon the walls of Nero's circus. The existing church was commenced in 1450 by Nicholas V, and dedicated by Urban VIII in 1626. The nave was finished as early as 1612. The work made little progress, however, until it was undertaken energetically by Julius II in 1506, with Bramante as architect. Raphael, Sangallo, and Michelangelo succeeded him; the façade was designed by Maderno, and the dome completed by Giacomo della Porta.

² Overthwart = athwart, transversely.

¹ Muffel says that the number of steps leading up to the basilica was twenty-eight; they appear to have been increased to thirty-five under Paul II (1464-71) (Muffel, p. 18 and n. 5).

² There is a strange diversity in the accounts given by various mediaeval authors as to the number of altars in S. Peter's; also as to whom the seven head altars were dedicated. Here follow the statements made by some of the writers most frequently quoted in these footnotes. Muffel (p. 25) says there were 105 altars and that the principal altars were dedicated as follows: (1) S. Simon and S. Jude, (2) S. Gregory, (3) S. Andrew, (4) S. Leo, (5) The Holy Cross, (6) our Lady, (7) The Vernacle. Ritter von Harff (p. 22) says that there were 100 altars, and that the principal ones were dedicated to (1) the Trinity, (2) All Souls, (3) S. Gregory, (4) our Lady, (5) S. Leo, (6) S. Lucian, (7) the Vernacle. Ein Büchlin, Strassburg, 1500, says there were 100 altars, and agrees with von Harff as to the dedication of the principal ones (see pp. C ii v and C iii). Adam de Usk, who was an official of the Papal court, gives the principal altars (on page 354) as follows: (1) S. Peter, (2) the Holy Cross, (3) the Vernacle, (4) S. Gregory, (5) S. Fabian and S. Sebastian, (6) S. Leo, (7) S. Andrew. A MS. Bodl. Digby 196, folio 10, entitled Descriptio urbis Rome cum indulgenciis, gives a total of 89, and says that the principal altars were (1) Sudarium, (2) S. Simon and S. Jude, (3) S. Gregory, (4) our Lady, (5) S. Andrew, (6) S. Leo, (7) Holy Cross. The Porkington MS., E. E. Text Society, 1867, p. 30, gives 100 altars, and adds: 'But vii byn moche and most of dygnyte, þat is to say, furst on þe right hond ys þe autur of þe vernaculle. ¶ The ij of þe honoure of oure lady: The þred of seynt Symon and Jude: The iiii of cent androw: The v of sent gregorye, and þer he lythe: The vi of sent leoo þe pope: The vii of þe holly cross, and þerin commythe no woman.' The Vernon MS. (1370), E. E. Text Society, 1867, vol. xxv, p. 2, on the Stacions of Rome, says:

In þat Munstre . men may fynde.

It will be observed that the two English authors agree, as do the two Germans; but that the two nationalities differ widely from each other. But one of the two English MSS. is much earlier than the other authorities; the dates being: Vernon MS. about 1370, Porkington MS. about 1460-70, Muffel 1452, Von Harff 1496-9, Ein Büchlin 1500. The date of the Digby MS. (Bodleian) is not mentioned, but it is about 1450 to 1475. Rucellai says: 'In detta chiesa sono novansei (96) altari dove si dice messa' (Il Giubileo dell' anno santo 1450, Archiv. St. Pat., 1881, vol. iv, fasc. iv, p. 567. Il Giubileo dell' anno santo is from the Zibaldini quaresimale which Giovanni Rucellai, merchant and citizen of Florence, ordered to be written in 1459, and which remained until recent times in the possession of the family of the same name. It then passed into other hands, and an extract from it was published in 1872 by John Temple-Leader, an Englishman, then resident in Florence, who had acquired it (see Archivio della Società Romana di Storia Patria, 1881, vol. iv, fasc. iv, p. 563, n. 1). While on the subject of the altars in S. Peter's, it is interesting to note a fact which Muffel states. He says that at the high altar are now (1452) the ancient pictures of S. Peter and S. Paul, which were shown by S. Silvester to Constantine, in order to ascertain whether they were the persons who had appeared to him in his dream (Muffel, p. 24; see also Nichols, Marvels of Rome, pp. 123 and 132). He says: 'The picture yet standith in the altar wall above the high altar' (of S. John Lateran). This passage occurs in a Cod. Vat. 4265 (Mirabilia), of the fourteenth century.

¹ In the Vernon MS. above mentioned (on p. 3), the Indulgences at S. Peter's are said to be as follows: At S. Peter's altar every day twenty-eight years. From Holy Thursday to Lammass, 14,000 years. On the date of the consecration of the church 14,000, and one-third remission of sins. When the Vernacle was shown, 3,000 years to Romans, 9,000 to other people, 12,000 to those that cross the sea to go on pilgrimage to Rome. According to Rucellai, there was, on the occasion of the jubilee of 1450, plenary remission of all sin for penitents who stayed in Rome for at least fifteen days, and visited every day the four Churches of S. Peter, S. Paul, S. John Lateran, and S. Mary Major (Il Giubileo dell' anno santo 1450, Archiv. St. Pat., 1881, vol. iv, fasc. iv, p. 563).

² SS. Processus and Martinianus are believed to have been baptized by S. Peter in the Mamertine prison, on which occasion a spring miraculously appeared in the floor of the prison for the purpose of the rite. S. Gregory speaks of their martyrdom in Hom. 32, n. 7. There was a church of their name outside the Porta Aurelia, and S. Lucina founded a cemetery under it. Their remains were at first laid to rest in this place; but, under Pascal I, they were translated to S. Peter's. Their feast-day is observed in many churches in Rome besides S. Peter's; especially at S. Pietro in Carcere. The mosaic at their altar in the basilica represents their martyrdom; the original of the picture is at the Quirinal. In some martyrologies they are associated with S. Firmin (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, July, vol. i, p. 300).

¹ The first mention of the Vernacle by name is made by Nicholas IV in 1290, who says: 'sui pretiosissimi vultus Imaginem, quam Veronicam fidelium vox communis appellat in singularis amoris insigne tribuit venerari.' Some authorities derive the word from a corruption of the words 'vera icon'. Others think that the name of the matron of Jerusalem, who helped our Lord on His way to Calvary, was Berenice or Beronice; whence the name Veronica. Her house is described as 550 paces from that of Pilate, and on the left hand of the pilgrim as he goes towards the Holy Sepulchre. The so-called Gospel of Nicodemus first mentions the tradition that she was the woman cured of the flux of blood (Mark v. 25). She is supposed to have been the wife of S. Amator, who again is believed to be identical with Zacchaeus of the New Testament. They both fled from persecution to France. Her name is not found in the Mart. Rom. (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon).

² The more ancient Basilica of S. Paul was founded, according to tradition, by Anacletus; it was enlarged by Constantine, and stands over the tomb of the Apostle, which was in the Catacombs of Lucina. The second church, in which the orientation of the former building was reversed, was commenced by Valentinian II, Theodosius, and Arcadius; it was completed by Honorius in 395, restored by Leo the Great in the fifth, by Eusebius in the sixth, and by Leo III in the eighth century. After its desecration by Saracen invaders, John VIII repaired the church, surrounded it with a fortified wall, and gave it the name of Johannopolis. Other works were carried out by Hildebrand (Gregory VII), whose name was engraved on the bronze doors. Honorius III decorated the apse with mosaics, and many other pontiffs repaired and beautified the church. The last to carry out important works therein was Benedict XIV, but it was destroyed by the disastrous fire of the year 1823, and the work of restoration, which is under the charge of the Italian Government, has not as yet been completed, though it is well advanced.

² The great Alcuin Bible at S. Paul's is of the ninth century; it is a good copy of the recension made for Charlemagne by Alcuin, and presented to the emperor at Christmas, 800. Bishop Grandison, of Exeter, in the fourteenth century, had all the Bibles of his diocese corrected by a copy of this Bible at S. Paul's. It is Jerome's only in the sense that it is his recension of the Vulgate.

¹ S. Fabian succeeded S. Anteros in the Holy See in the year 236. According to Eusebius, his election was unanimous; because, when the clergy and the people were assembled to choose a Pope, a dove settled on his head; this was accepted as a miraculous sign. But we know little certain about him. Eusebius says that he was of a good Roman family; that he was the nineteenth Bishop of Rome, and reigned from 236 to 251; other authorities say that he was the twenty-first Pope, and only reigned fourteen years, perishing in the persecution of Decius in 250. The latter version is accepted by the Bollandists as the more correct. He was buried in the cemetery of S. Callixtus on the Appian Way, and the church of S. Sebastian was erected over his grave. S. Cyprian calls him, in a letter to Pope Cornelius, an incomparable man; he is said to have baptized the Emperor Philippus Arabus; he sent S. Denis to Gallia; and during his pontificate, according to Gregory of Tours, the Churches of Paris, Tours, Toulouse, Narbonne, Arles, Clermont, and Limoges were founded (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, January, vol. ii, p. 252; Duchesne, Liber Pontificalis, vol. i, p. 148).

² S. Sebastian was born at Narbonne; his family came originally from Milan, where his youth was spent. He came to Rome about 283. He was appointed officer in the Pretorian body-guard; it was not known at the time that he was a Christian. He used his official position to help his fellow believers as much as possible; amongst others, he was able to be of assistance to the Pope S. Caius. His martyrdom took place in the reign of Diocletian and Maximianus. Owing to the care of a pious widow, Irene, he recovered from the wounds inflicted on him by the arrows; but he was beaten to death in the circus, and his body was thrown into the cloaca. It was recovered and buried, in the manner described by our chronicler (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, January, vol. ii, p. 259).

¹ This passage is interesting, as it shows that in the fifteenth century the site of the martyrdom of S. Peter was believed by some to be near the Basilica of S. Peter, and not on the Janiculum at S. Peter in Montorio. For a full discussion of this subject see lecture by Comm. Prof. O. Marucchi, published in the Journal of the Proceedings of the British and American Archaeological Society. The modern error, which fixes the site at S. Pietro in Montorio, appears to have crept in somewhere about this period (1450), for which see In diesem Büchlin stet geschryben wie Rom von erst gebauet, &c., Strassburg, 1500, p. G ii v: 'Es ist zû sant peter in montorio ist ein clöster des ordens sante francisci und halten di observanz | uff der selben stat die kirch lygt da is gemartert worden und gecreütziget sant peter der zwelffpot | da is grosz genad und ablasz.' Muffel's account is interesting, as it also shows that in 1452 the site of S. Pietro in Montorio was, by some, held to be the true one. He says that, after parting with S. Paul, 'sand Peter ward wyder in kerker gefürt, und on einem andern tag gekreutzigt auf einem perg zwischen den zweyen nodellen' (nadel = pyramid) 'dye do sten eine in der maur, do sand Paulus thor hinauf get und Rumulus und Remus auf begraben ligen . . . und zwischen der anderen nodelen, die do steht zwischen der Tyber prucken und sand Peter' (p. 28). Again, in speaking of the Church of S. Pietro in Montorio, von Harff says: 'Off deser stat is gemartelt ind gecruciget woirden sijnt Peter apostel' (Pilgerfahrt in den Jahren 1496-9, p. 30, Dr. E. von Groote, Cöln, 1860). The Church of S. Pietro in Montorio is ancient, and is mentioned in the ninth century by Agnello in the Liber Pontificalis of Ravenna. Sixtus IV bestowed the church upon the Franciscans in 1472, and Ferdinand and Isabella employed Pontelli, the architect of the Palazzo Venezia, to rebuild it (Armellini, p. 551; Marucchi, p. 460; Nibby, p. 587; Urlichs, Cod. Topog., p. 174).

¹ The church of S. John Lateran occupies part of the site of the family palace of the Laterani. At the time of Constantine it was imperial property, and is said to have been conferred by him upon S. Silvester as an episcopal residence. The emperor founded the basilica, and from this time the Patriarchum, as it was called, was the ordinary residence of the Popes. The basilica was destroyed by an earthquake, or by fire, and was rebuilt by Sergius III (904-11). Innocent IV embellished it, and Boniface VIII, in the year of his jubilee, decorated it magnificently. Two outbreaks of fire, in 1307 and 1361, caused great damage, which was repaired by Clement V, Innocent VI, and Urban V; the last named sent funds from Avignon. On the return of the Popes to Rome, the building was found to be in a ruinous condition; it was subsequently entirely renovated by Clement VII, Innocent X, and Clement XII.

² Muffel gives a very careful description of the Lateran, and says that the indulgences, when the heads of SS. Peter and Paul are shown, are the same as when the Vernacle is shown at S. Peter's: i.e. 7,000 years for Romans, 10,000 for other Italians, and 14,000 years for those who come from across the mountains. He also mentions the lex regia, which Cola di Rienzo hung up in the church: 'Item neben an der seul stet der zwelf tafel eine von messing, dorin die recht geschriben stend die den Romern von Athenis geschickt wurden do Rom nur xx jar gestanden was' (pp. 10-11).

¹ Montaigne also saw the heads of the Apostles when he travelled in Italy, and describes them thus: 'La veille de Pasques je vis à S. Jean de Latran, les chefs S. Pol et S. Pierre, qu'on y montre, qui ont encore leur charnure, teint et barbe, comme s'ils vivoient; S. Pierre, un visage blanc un peu longuet, le teint vermeil & tirant sur le sanguin, une barbe grise fourchue, la teste couverte d'une mitre papale. S. Pol, noir, le visage large et plus gras, la teste plus grosse, la barbe grise, espesse' (Journal du Voyage en Italie, ed. by Ancona, Città di Castello, 1895).

² S. Pancratius was the only son of wealthy heathen parents of Synnada, a town in the north of Phrygia salutaris. On the death of his father he went with his uncle Dionysius to Rome, where they lived in a large house on the Caelian Hill. They were both converted to the Christian faith, in spite of the persecution which was then raging. The uncle fell ill, and died in peace; but S. Pancras, in spite of his youth, was sentenced to death by the sword. He suffered martyrdom in the year 304, in the reign of Diocletian, on the Via Aurelia, and was buried by the noble matron Octavilla in the cemetery of Kalepodius (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, May, vol. iii, p. 17).

² 'Item appresso al detto luogo due campane non molto grandi senza battaglia che si dice furono le prime campane che si facessino mai al mondo' (Rucellai, Il Giubileo dell'anno santo 1450, Archiv. St. Pat., 1881, vol. iv, fasc. iv, p. 571. See also Muffel, p. 14).

³ Our chronicler has made the mistake of confusing the very ancient church of S. Pastor with the titulus pastoris, the old name of S. Pudenziana. S. Pastor was near S. Clemente; it is mentioned in the papers of the hospital of S. Salvatore, in the year 1452, as 'ecclesia S. Pastoris prope S. Clementem de qua non restat nisi pars tribunae'. It appears to have been attached to the Monastery of S. Clemente; for, in a catalogue of churches of the time of Pius V, it is referred to as 'S. Pastore dentro S. Clemente'. The catalogue of Turin says: 'Ecclesia S. Pastoris habet unum sacerdotem'. There is now no trace whatever of it; and Armellini, while admitting that he knows of no historical record of the saint, thinks that he belonged to the early apostolic era in Rome. Marucchi, in his article on S. Pudenziana, thinks that S. Pastor was the brother of Pope Pius I (142-57). (Armellini, p. 501; Marucchi, p. 365.) Adinolfi says that the tribuna of the church was standing near S. Clemente in 1462. Regarding the legend of Pope Joan, he says that Martinus Polonus is one of the earliest authors to mention the fable, which was invented about the thirteenth century (vol. i, pp. 317-18; vol. ii, p. 79). The fable of Pope Joan is also mentioned by Muffel, p. 18. The place where the statue stood which in the Middle Ages was supposed to record this event was near S. Clemente; it is marked in the large map (in sections) at the end of De Rossi's Piante iconografiche di Roma, with the words 'Logo dove partori la papessa'. There is some interesting information regarding the sedes stercoraria in Nichols, Marvels of Rome, pp. 129-30, notes 274 and 275. Finally, for a discussion of the whole subject, see Tomassetti's able article in the Bullettino Comunale, 1907, p. 82, on La Statua della Papessa Giovanna. He attributes the legend to three causes: (1) The rite of the sella stercoraria, abandoned after the time of Leo X; (2) the existence of a statue on the roadside, which statue he believes to be that of Juno suckling Hercules, in the Chiaramonte gallery of the Vatican Museum; and (3) the abandoning of this road for the procession of the possessio. This change was attributed to the existence of this statue, round which the legend grew; whereas it was, according to Tomassetti, really due to the impracticability of the road, until it was reopened by Sixtus V, who is also believed to have removed the statue to the Vatican.

¹ The church of S. Croce in Gerusalemme was founded by Constantine, in the fourth century, in Palatio Sessoriano; which palace, in classical times, was near the place of public execution. Marucchi thinks that S. Helena may have lived in the palace, which was at that time joined to the Lateran, and to the gardens of the Esquiline. The church was formerly known under the title of the Basilica Sessoriana. Its present name is derived from the portion of the Holy Cross placed in it by the Empress Helena when she brought that relic to Rome from Jerusalem. The church was embellished in the fifth century by Placidia and Valentinian III, and about this time the building was called the Basilica Heleniana. It was restored by Gregory II in 720, and by Benedict VII in the latter part of the tenth century. The present form of the church is due to Benedict XIV. The extraordinary legend (which follows in the text) of a Pope being dismembered at his own request at the door of the church, is due to the fact that Sylvester II expired, while he was celebrating Mass, on Quadragesima Sunday in 1003. He was buried at S. John Lateran. It is possible that he may have expressed a wish that his heart should be buried in the church in which he died. He was generally believed to have acquired magical knowledge from the Mohammedans in Spain, and the somewhat gruesome legend has probably developed by degrees around the above data. His epitaph still exists, and is quoted in full in n. 2, p. 77. For the origin of the name Sessorio or Sessoriano, see Adinolfi. He derives it from the Amphitheatrum Castrense, which was named the Sessorian, on account of the graduated order of its steps, and gave its name to the neighbourhood (vol. i, p. 272).

² S. Constantia, the daughter of Constantine, bears also the title 'Augusta'. She was cured of a dangerous illness at the grave of S. Agnes; this caused her conversion to Christianity. Gallicanus, a military leader, had asked for her hand in marriage; but when he had to leave Rome for one of his campaigns, she gave him, as companions, her servants SS. John and Paul; receiving into her household, in return, SS. Attica and Artemia, daughters of Gallicanus by a former marriage. Through her prayers they were converted to the Christian faith, as also was Gallicanus on his return from victory. S. Constantia and her two companions took upon themselves a vow of chastity; she built a church and dwelling at the grave of S. Agnes, in which she lived until her death in the fourth century (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, February, vol. iii, p. 67).

life, p. 263. Duchesne, in n. 3, ib., places its origin about the end of the eleventh century, and traces it to the Vita et Gesta Hildebrandi of Cardinal Benno, who wrote in 1099. Vincent de Beauvais gives it at length (xxiv. 98). Sylvester was, however, buried in the Lateran; in the left aisle, near the entrance to the modern Corsini chapel. The tomb was stated by John the Deacon to drip with water. He says: 'Cuius' (Silvestri) 'saepe sepulcrum, etiam in serenissimo aere, cum non sit in humido loco, aquarum guttas, quod satis est hominibus admirandum, visibiliter emanat. Inde est altare sanctorum Quadraginta Martyrum' (Migne, P. L., t. cxciv, p. 1551). The tomb was opened in 1648; the stone which bore the epitaph was preserved, and is still to be seen on one of the pillars of the right aisle of the church. Another very strange legend grew up about this tomb; viz. that the bones were heard to move and rattle whenever a Pope was about to die. The origin of this legend is explained by the inscription, which is as follows:—

Iste locus mundi Silvestri membra sepulti
 Venturo domino conferet ad sonitum
 Quem dederat mundo celebre doctissima virgo
 Atque caput mundi culmina romulea
 Primum Gerbertus meruit francigena sede

 Omnipotens domine dic miserere sui.

Obiit anno. dominice incarnationis $\overline{\text{MIII}}$. INDIC. I. M. $\overline{\text{MAI}}$. $\overline{\text{D}}$. XII.

The epitaph says nothing of the humidity, but the 'tumultus ossium' of the Liber Pontificalis (p. 263) was suggested by the second line. Duchesne says: 'Dans le venturo Domino on a vu, non le Souverain Juge, mais le pape futur, celui qui remplacera le pontife actuel en fonctions: ad sonitum a été entendu, non de la trompette du jugement dernier, mais du bruit que font en se choquant les os de Silvestre II (Silvestri membra sepulti . . . conferet) chaque fois qu'il y a un dominus venturus à l'horizon. C'est un exemple remarquable de légende formée d'après une inscription mal comprise' (Note 5, p. 264).

² Muffel says that the heart of the Pope is buried in S. John Lateran, but appears to be confusing the grave with the chapel built by Pope Hilary in honour of S. Stephen Protomartyr; for he says: 'Item hinten in der kirchen in der abseytten' (apsis) 'do ist auch das grab sant stephanus des bapsts, der sich zuhauen liess vor der kirchen zu Jerusalem zu dem heiligen creutz . . . und dasselbig grab, darinn das hertz ligt, gibt stetigs feuchtikeit und donnert darynn, wen ein bapst sterben sol, das mansz etlich tag davor hort' (p. 12). ¹ The more ancient Basilica of S. Lorenzo outside the walls was founded by Constantine, and enlarged by Galla Placidia and Pelagius II in the fifth and sixth centuries. It went under the name of speciosa; and, as it was erected over the tomb of the saint in the Catacombs of Ciriaca, it was also called ad corpus, its position being further denoted by the words super arenario cryptae. The entrance to it was on the far side; that is to say, where the tomb of Pius IX now is. The second basilica, according to Armellini, was the work of Sixtus III; the two buildings were separate and distinct until the time of Honorius III (1218). The church of Sixtus III, which was erected about the year 432, was known as the basilica maior from its size; later, as the Basilica S. Maria presso S. Lorenzo from its dedication. The entrance to it was from the Via Tiburtina, so that the orientation was reversed. Honorius joined the two churches together (they were then back to back), and destroyed the two apses, thus making the basilica of Constantine the confessio of the church of Sixtus III. The porch dates from this period. Alexander IV decorated the interior in 1254 (Armellini, p. 679; Duchesne, Lib. Pontif., vol. i, p. 197, n. 84, pp. 233-4; Marucchi, p. 496; Nibby, p. 296).

² S. Gamaliel, a Pharisee, was a leading teacher of the Jewish law, in which he instructed S. Paul. For the account of the burial of S. Stephen, and Gamaliel's apparition to Lucian, cf. Stadler, Heiligenlexikon.

² De Rossi mentions this inscription, which still exists. It, however, contains four more lines (at the end), which are not given by our chronicler. He says that the inscription was generally to be found in the books of indulgences and relics which were used by pilgrims in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries (Bollettino d'Arch. Crist., Ser. 3, An. 6, Rome, 1881, p. 86 sq.). S. Hippolytus appears to have been a Roman officer whose duty it was to guard S. Lawrence; he was so struck with his constancy that he was converted and baptized by him. His nurse's name was Concordia; they both suffered martyrdom on the same day in A.D. 258, Hippolytus by being dragged by wild horses, and Concordia by being scourged to death (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, August, vol. iii, p. 4). S. Romanus was a soldier of the Imperial Guard under Valerian and Gallienus, who, witnessing the tortures preceding the martyrdom of S. Laurence, was so struck by his patience and fortitude that he embraced Christianity, and was baptized by the saint before his death. He was beheaded outside the Porta Salaria, and buried in the Agro Verano by the priest Justinus (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, August, vol. ii, p. 408). SS. Triphonia and Quirilla were mother and daughter. The for meris said by some authorities (amongst which is the Mart. Rom.) to have been wife of the Emperor Decius. This, however, was not so; but she may have been a relative, or perhaps the slave of his wife. She was baptized by the priest Justinus with her daughter, and both were martyred on the following day (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, October, vol. viii, p. 313 sq.).

² The Basilica of S. Mary Major was founded near the Macellum Liviae in the year 352; it was enlarged by Sixtus III about eighty years later, after which its name was changed from Basilica Siciniana to Basilica S^{ae} Mariae ad praesepe. It was also known as S. Maria in superaggio, in allusion to the agger of Servius Tullius. Great additions to the church were made by Nicholas IV at the end of the thirteenth century. In the fifteenth century Alexander VI gilded the ceiling with the first gold which came from America. Sixtus V and Paul V constructed the two chapels which bear their names; finally, the modern façade was constructed by Benedict XIV in 1741, replacing that of Eugenius III of the twelfth century. The beautiful campanile is the work of Gregory XI, and was built after his return to Rome from Avignon (Armellini, p. 383; Marucchi, p. 149; Adinolfi, vol. ii, p. 148). Muffel gives an interesting account of a chapel which he saw in S. Maria Maggiore; it was then (1452) being decorated by a pious Roman lady by permission of Nicholas V (then Pope). Our Lady had appeared to this woman in a vision, which event was followed by a miracle. The Roman lady would seem to have begun a picture of the Virgin in this chapel, and it was costing her more than she could afford to expend. She began to beg for the purpose, by order of our Lady, who in the vision ordered her to go towards S. Paul's Church, and ask the first person whom she met for alms. First a man passing her gave her two gulden, and then a woman gave her two more gulden; but when she opened her hand she found she had six gulden, and the story ends thus: 'ist allererst geschehen im gnadenreichen jar, das im tausent virhundert und im zweiund funfzigsten jar gewest ist' (Muffel, p. 33).

² S. Sabina is coupled with S. Seraphia in the Acta Sanctorum, and the facts related regarding her life agree generally with those here given. Some ancient authors describe her as having been a virgin martyr, but she was, according to accepted accounts, the widow of Valentinus and the daughter of Herod Metallarius, as our chronicler says. Her church in Rome is said to have been built on the site of her ancestral home (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon (under SS. Seraphia and Sabina); Acta Sanctorum, August, vol. vi, p. 496).

² The history of S. George is obscure to this day. The so-called Acta regarding him were rejected by the Council at Rome under Gelasius I in 494, as being the work of Arians. This gave rise to a belief that S. George had never existed. He would, however, appear to have been honoured in very early times; and the doubt which arose later may in part be the cause of the legends (e.g. that of the dragon) which have grown up around his name. We may, however, accept that he suffered martyrdom under Diocletian in Nicomedia, or Lydda, in the year 303. According to Metaphrastes, he was born of a good family in Cappadocia; after his father's death he went with his mother to Palestine, her native country, and where she had much property at Lydda, between Joppa and Jerusalem. He joined the army and attained high rank and honour under Diocletian; but later, when he became a Christian, was barbarously tortured and finally decapitated by the orders of the emperor. While one need not accept all the Acts regarding him, the Liturgies and, above all, the Sacramentarium of Gregory the Great are practically incontrovertible proofs of his existence and of his martyrdom. The Council held in Oxford in 1222 ordered his feast-day to be solemnly kept throughout England every year (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, April, vol. iii, p. 100).

¹ The monastery of S. Andrew here mentioned was attached to the church of S. Gregory the Great. The monastery (which preceded the church) was founded by S. Gregory in his own paternal home; he also built a church, which he attached to it and dedicated to S. Andrew. After his death the monastery was abandoned, but Gregory II restored it, and erected another church, which he dedicated to his namesake. This church was completely altered by Cardinal Scipio Borghese in 1633, and again rebuilt by the monks in 1725 (Armellini, p. 290; Marucchi, p. 212).

¹ The church of SS. John and Paul is believed to have been erected by Byzantius and his son Pammachius in the fourth century, over the house in which the two saints lived and suffered martyrdom. It was first known under the name of the titulus Pammachii. Pammachius was a friend of S. Jerome, and is mentioned by him in his letters. The church was restored by Symmachus in the fifth century, also by Hadrian I and Leo III in the latter half of the eighth. The beautiful apse, the portico, and perhaps the fine pavement were constructed in 1159 by Hadrian IV, the English Pope. Cardinal Howard, in 1677, placed the bodies of the two saints under the high altar of the upper church; but it was not till 1887 that the excavations of Father Germano made the interesting subterranean dwelling-house of the saints, and the frescoes contained therein, accessible (Armellini, p. 276; Nibby, p. 266; Marucchi, p. 203).

² ' & þat ' in margin of MS.

Templa tremunt, pavimenta ruunt et tigna sub illis
 Ignibus e celis pereunt exusta favillis,
 Exiliunt lapides, area sola manet.
 Igneus ex templo globus est, emissus in illos
 Incendens homines vestes caput atque capillos,
 Astantesque viri iure cremantur ibi.
 Haec ne fortuitu mala provenisse putentur,
 Signa crucis confixa sibi gestare videntur,
 Gestant Iudei corpora signa dei.

But, in truth, the hatred of Julian was so great, that some of the stories about him are too horrible to repeat here; there is, however, one exception, a very notable one. The author of the Gesta episcoporum Neapolitanorum (eighth or ninth century) says: 'Iuliano apostata imperatore facto, ad idolorum cultum converso, blanda persecutio fuit, iliciens magis quam impellens ad sacrificandum, in qua multi voluntate propria corruerunt.' A very remarkable instance of toleration and fair-mindedness in such an epoch.

¹ The account, as given by our chronicler, of these two Roman saints is correct in all details. They appear to have been martyred in secret on June 26, 362, a report being afterwards spread that they had been exiled. But SS. Crispus, Crispinianus, and Benedicta found the bodies of the martyrs in response to their prayers; but they also, on refusing to sacrifice to false gods, were in their turn beheaded. It is interesting to note that the two saints were held in great reverence in England: for, by the order of the Council held in Oxford in the year 1222, it was laid down that on their feast-day it was obligatory to hear Mass before commencing the day's work. It is just possible that they were confused with S. John the Evangelist and S. Paul the Apostle (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, June, vol. v, p. 158).

That herd þe fadir he cam þidir and askid forgifnes of his trespas and be fore his eyne his sone was cured, eke þei both at esterne folowing weṛ mad cristen men for so was þe usage þanne. ¹ S. Trifone in posterula was built by Crescentius, Prefect of Rome, in the year 957, under John XII, iuxta posterulas, in the street now called the Via della Scrofa. It was pulled down to construct the Augustinian convent now occupied by the Ministry of Marine (Armellini, p. 651; Nibby, p. 699). '¶ Zu sant Tryfon lyget nahet by sant Augustin' (Ein Büchlin, &c., Strassburg, 1500, p. E vi v, B.M.).

² S. Felix IV, fifty-fourth Pope in order from S. Peter, was elected in 526, after S. John I's death in prison during the reign of Theodoric. He was a worthy Pope, and did much work in building and adorning churches. More especially he converted the Temple of Romulus into a church (SS. Cosmo and Damian); restored the Basilica of S. Saturninus, which had been destroyed by fire; and completed that of S. Stephen. He lived into the reign of Athalaric, and died in 529 or 530, being buried at S. Peter's (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, January, vol. ii, p. 1032; Duchesne, Liber Pontificalis, vol. i, p. 279).

³ S. Aurea was martyred at Ostia in the middle of the third century by being thrown into the sea with a stone round her neck. On referring to S. Censurinus, S. Mennas is amongst those who suffered on the same occasion (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon). The Anonymus of Einsiedeln (ed. Hülsen), ch. xiii, n. 12, p. 42, mentions a church of S. Menna, which Armellini thinks was dedicated to the celebrated Egyptian martyr, S. Mennas. It stood on the celebrated portico from the Vatican to S. Paul's. Leo IV and Pascal I restored and adorned it, but it is not mentioned after the tenth century (Armellini, p. 742).

¹ SS. Tryphon and Respicius came, according to one account, from Phrygia, and suffered martyrdom under Decius during the winter of the year A.D. 250. Other stories differ as to their birth, standing, and age. Some say that S. Tryphon was a shepherd and of tender age, others that he was of noble birth and grown up. Respicius again, according to one account, was of the same age and standing, a companion and fellow convert of S. Tryphon; according to another, he was a heathen military officer, who was converted on seeing the constancy of the saint under torture. They are also sometimes associated with a S. Nympha, about whom little is known (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon).

According to Muffel it remained open 'piz einer fresslich gemort het und ging dadurch und sprach: wers got lieb oder leyt, so wolt er hindurch geen und im müsten sein sünd vergeben werden'. This being reported to the pope, he ordered the door to be walled up (p. 20). See also Rucellai, Il Giubileo dell'anno santo 1450, Archiv. St. Pat., 1881, vol. iv, fasc. iv, p. 570.

Chapter xii of the Legenda aurea of G. da Voragine also refers to this subject. Graf mentions this and says: 'Allora per sette giorni consecutivi promulga ogni giorno una legge in favor della chiesa e della fede; e la prima è che nella città di Roma Cristo sia adorato qual vero Dio; la seconda, che chiunque bestemmia Cristo sia punito; la terza, che chiunque fa ingiuria a un cristiano perda la metà del suo avere; la quarta, che il Pontefice Romano sia da tutti i vescovi riconosciuto per capo; la quinta, che chiunque ripara in una chiesa sia tenuto immune; la sesta, che nessuno possa costruir chiese dentro le mura di una città senza averne ottenuta licenza dal vescovo; la settima che alla edificazione delle chiese si consacri il decimo dei possedimenti imperiali. L'ottavo giorno l'imperatore va alla chiesa di S. Pietro, accusa le sue colpe, e dovendosi porre le fondamenta della nuova basilica prende a cavare con le proprie mani la terra, e ne leva sulle proprie sue spalle dodici sporte' (Roma nella memoria, &c., vol. ii, p. 82).

¹ The church of S. Peter ad vincula was built by Eudoxia, wife of Valentinian III, to preserve the chain with which Peter was bound at Jerusalem. Leo the Great added another chain with which the Apostle was bound at Rome during the persecution of Nero. The date of the church was about 442; it was called the Basilica Eudoxiana, from its founder, and dedicated to the SS. Apostles. Subsequently it was restored in the eighth century by Hadrian I, and entirely reconstructed by Sixtus IV and Julius II in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries (Adinolfi, vol. ii, p. 108; Armellini, p. 553; Marucchi, p. 311; Nibby, p. 663). Muffel says of the church (p. 42): 'do ligt gar ein grosser gegosner steiner trog und ein abtgot dapey.'

¹ Eudisia was the wife of Theodosius II. Her name was Athenais, and she was the daughter of Leontius (or Heraclius), an Athenian philosopher. In the year A.D. 424 she went to Constantinople, was instructed in the tenets of Christianity by Atticus the Patriarch, and was baptized, taking the name of Eudisia. She married the emperor and bore him one daughter, Lucinia Eudisia, who married the Emperor Maximus. Eudisia undertook her pilgrimage to Jerusalem in the year 438; on her return she brought back the relics of S. Stephen with her. But, in the year 449, the emperor accused her of infidelity; this suspicion led to the execution of the patrician Paulinus. She afterwards obtained leave to retire to Palestine, where she spent the rest of her life in piety and works of charity. She was a distinguished poetess; wrote a commentary on the first eight books of the Bible in verse, a paraphrase of the books of Daniel and Zechariah, and three works in praise of the martyr S. Cyprian. None of her works have, however, come down to us. She is often called Eudoxia; she should not be confused with the Empress Eudoxia, who persecuted S. John Chrysostom, and died in the year A.D. 408 (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, August, vol. iii, p. 4).

² Alexander I was elected Pope in the year 109. His feast-day is on May 3; there is no account in Stadler's Heiligenlexikon of the miracle of the chains here related by our chronicler. He was imprisoned, together with two priests, Eventius and Theodulus, under the Emperor Hadrian (according to some Trajan); the name of his jailer was Quirinus, and he, with many others, was converted and baptized by the pope. They were all martyred under circumstances of great cruelty, and buried on the Via Nomentana. This Pope is remarkable for having introduced some customs into the Church which have lasted until the present day. For example, he was the first to mix water with the wine of the Sacrament, in memory of the blood and water which flowed from our Saviour's side; also the custom of mixing salt with holy water, the salt being previously blessed, is due to him (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, May, vol. i, p. 367; Duchesne, Liber Pontificalis, vol. i, p. 127).

³ The church of S. Anastasia gave a title to a cardinal in the fifth century. It was rebuilt in 759, again by Innocent III in 1210, and restored by Sixtus IV in 1475. Urban VIII rebuilt the façade in 1636, and Cardinal da Cunha altered the interior to its

But neuerþelasse for perfeccion of þe book we wil plant in sum notable processe which fel in þis place. The holi doctor seynt gregory in his book of omelies telleth a notable processe of a woman which haunted mech þis cherech and þis tale is in þe xl omelie of his book þat is to sey þe last. There was an elde woman in rome swech tyme as he leued in monasterie be foṛ he was pope.* This woman hith as he seith redempta. Sche had ioyned on to hir in felauchip too ʒong women of gode condicions which weṛ on to hiṛ disciples. On of hem hith romula of þe oþir he seith he knew þe fas but not þe name. Aft̄ iii leued þus in good lif in a hous fast be þis cherech of seynt mary and euery day were þei in þat place with deuoute contemplacioun and in ful despect habite. So aftir many ʒeres þus spent in holy lyf þis romula fel in to greuous siknesse swech as þei clepe þe peralise which encrested up on hiṛ þat sche lost aft̄ þe use of hir membris. Thus lay sche many ʒeris wel blessed of god for þe moṛ seknesse sche had þe moṛ paciens had sche. On a day sche cleped hir maystresse on to hir and eke hir felaw and prayed hem to sitte by hiṛ in felauchip to hir coumfort. Euene as þe sitte by hiṛ þei herd grete melodye in þe hous and felt sote sauouṛ of which þei felt neuer ere and bisily þei gunne loke on þis woman which lay þus long sek for þei supposed uerily þat sche knew more of swech þingis þan þei. Tho þe seek woman seid on to hem pese wordes. Beth not a ferd for I schal not deye pese iiii dayes. The iiii day sche cleped hem a geyn and prayed hem þat þe prest myth come and ministir on to hiṛ þe holy sacrament.

¹ The accepted story of S. Anastasia, widow and martyr, differs somewhat from that of our chronicler, although he is in the main correct. She appears to have lived in the time of Diocletian, and to have been baptized as a child, a rare occurrence in those days. She refused to live as a wife with her pagan husband, Publius, and he imprisoned her in her own house. When, however, she was like to perish from hunger, her husband himself died, while on a journey to Persia, and she was free. Her works of Christian charity brought her into contact with S. Crisogonus; she accompanied him to Aquileia, where he was martyred. Here she was imprisoned, and left for thirty days without food or drink. She was then put into a boat, through the bottom of which many holes had been bored, and sent to sea in it. But the boat did not sink; and finally she was burnt at the stake, in the year 304. Her remains, according to some accounts, were brought to Rome; according to others, to Constantinople (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon).

So was it do in dede and aftir þat ministry fulfillid þei herd þe same noyse agayn and felt þe same sauouþ more ouyr / þei herd in þe strete as it had be f. 390 r too sundry qweres on of men an othir of women singing ful swetly and in al þis swete melodye þei loked at romula and hir soule was passed and goo. This tellith seint gregorie to þis conclusioun þat þei þat seme wrecchid are sumtyme fulder worthi with god and we rehersed þis to þis ende to magnifying of þis cherech which þese women most used.¹

¹ The account of the lives of S. Redempta and Romula will be found in St. Gregory's Dial. iv. 15 (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, July, vol. v, p. 482).

² The church of S. Lorenzo in Panisperna was formerly known as S. Lorenzo in Formoso or Formonso, the meaning of which is obscure. It might refer to alterations carried out by Pope Formosus; but in Formonso, which is mentioned in the ninth century, would appear to refer to a locality. The church was rebuilt and consecrated by Boniface VIII in the year 1300, again under Gregory XIII in 1575, and lastly by Leo XIII in 1893 (Armellini, p. 306; Marucchi, p. 374; Adinolfi, ii, p. 250; Nibby, p. 305). See also Hülsen's Pianta di Roma dell' Anonimo Einsiedlense, where it is mentioned three times, on pp. 17, 25, and 28, always as 'S. Laurentius in Formonso, ubi ille assatus est'. 'Ancho el palazo de holimpiade dove fo arostito sancto lorenzo benche deto dove mo e la ecclesia cioe monastiero de done io o vedutto la fornazeta & baxatolla dove quello sancto fo arostito' (Edifichazion di molti palazzi, Venice, 1480, p. B iv). The name Panisperna is difficult to explain; it may refer to an old pagan Latin inscription in the church, in which the name Perpennia occurs. In the Mirabilia, Codex Marcianus, the following passage is met with: 'In thermis Olympiadis, ubi assatus fuit sanctus Laurentius, et vocatur ibi Panisperna; ideo dicitur Panisperna quia Olympias, uxor Philippi regis Macedonii ibi colebatur pro dea, et offerebatur ei panis, pola et perna, vel caro porcina' (cf. Graf, vol. i, p. 217). But the writer has, of course, confused the baths of Alexander Severus with a supposed palace of Alexander the Great; the latter was at this period popularly believed to have been offered and to have accepted the crown of the empire by the Romans.

² For a full account of the life and martyrdom of S. Laurence, see Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, August, vol. ii, p. 485.

³ It is believed that the church of the SS. Apostoli dates from the Constantinian period, with which opinion, however, Armellini does not agree; nor is the passage in the Liber Pontificalis, which would attribute it to Julius I (337-40), quite convincing; but the church was certainly restored by Pelagius I and John III about the middle of the sixth century. It was rebuilt in 1420, and again in 1702. Stephen V and Martin II restored the church, and a portico was added to it by Cardinal Giuliano della Rovere, afterwards Julius II (Armellini, p. 139; Marucchi, p. 390; Nibby, p. 108; Adinolfi, ii, p. 16).

⁴ The date of S. Philip's death is variously given between the years 54 and 90. The relics of his body were formerly for many years venerated at Hierapolis; they were brought later to Constantinople, and thence to Rome. At the latter place they were placed in the church dedicated to the SS. Apostles. The Heiligenlexikon says, 'Wahrscheinlich wegen der oben genannten Widmung dieser Basilica an alle Apostel wurde ehemals am 1. Mai zugleich das Fest aller Apostel begangen.'

³ The S. Nazarius usually coupled with S. Celsus, whose story is related by our chronicler, is not the S. Nazarius mentioned in the last note. The confusion arises from the two saints having a common festival day, June 12. The accepted history regarding him differs slightly from that of our author, who is however generally correct. His father Africanus, for instance, is said to have been a heathen. Noticing the difference in the religion of his parents, S. Nazarius was divided in his opinions; until at last he was inclined to the Christian faith, and was baptized by S. Linus. His father endeavoured to bring him back to the pagan religion, but in vain; finally, under threats of persecution, and at both his parents' wish, he left Rome, proceeded to Piacenza and thence to Milan where he met SS. Gervasius and Protasius. The rest of the account given of him in this MS. is correct. SS. Nazarius and Celsus were martyred in the year 68, and buried by the Christian community at Milan. Their resting-place was revealed to S. Ambrose, who found the body of S. Nazarius quite incorrupt and emitting a pleasant odour. S. Ambrose buried the bodies in the church of the SS. Apostoli. Parts of the relics of the two saints were distributed to various towns; one was given to the church of S. Giovanni in Fonte in Rome (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, July, vol. vi, p. 503).

¹ Regarding the crypt, Muffel says that there was great pardon at the altar under which half the bodies of SS. Peter and Paul lay, but that: 'man sperret die gruft selten auf von sünd wegen, die do geschehen möchten, dan es ist daselbst finster' (p. 23).

² The church of S. Maria in Dominica is the only one which still retains the old title dominicum. It is thought by some to occupy the site of the house of S. Ciriaca, which stood in the Castra Peregrinorum. The name in navicellis is considered both by Armellini and Marucchi to be modern, and not to be found before the sixteenth century, when Leo X substituted the present boat, now in the Piazza, for the ancient one; but from our MS. we see that the name was in general use in Rome at the time of Nicholas V, and possibly for some time before that. The church was restored by Pascal I in 817. Leo X, when he was still a cardinal, reconstructed it from designs furnished by Raphael or

The munday in þe secunde weke is þe stacion at a chersch of seynt clement¹ in wech chersch restith his body and þese bodies, of seint ignace þe perhaps Bramante. The portico is said to have been designed by Michelangelo. It was finally restored by Cardinal Riario Sforza in the pontificate of Pius VII (Armellini, p. 398; Marucchi, p. 217; Nibby, p. 371; Adinolfi, i, p. 350).

¹ It is believed that S. Clement constructed an oratory in his own house, remains of which have been discovered in the third or lowest level (near the Mithraeum) under the present church dedicated to the saint. This oratory was replaced by a basilica, in which the Council of 417 was held, and in which S. Gregory read two of his homilies in 590. That the church was very ancient is proved by the existence of the slave's collar, mentioned by De Rossi in Boll. d'Arch. Crist., 1863, p. 26 sq. This basilica, as is well known, was entirely destroyed by Robert Guiscard in 1084, and the present church was erected over the ruins. For the history of the discovery of the earlier basilica in 1857 and its excavation, see S. Clement, Pope and Martyr, and his Basilica in Rome, by J. Mullooly, O.P., Rome, 1873; Adinolfi, vol. i, p. 305; Armellini, p. 191; Marucchi, p. 287; Nibby, p. 170. Muffel says (p. 42): 'und vor der thur ligen zwen sten, darauf man vil heiligen hat gemartert.'

² The various accounts of the life of S. Clement are most conflicting. The date of his tenure of the papacy, and the order in which he came after S. Peter, are even disputed. The generally accepted version is that he was the son of Faustinus (Faustus), a Roman citizen of the Caelian Hill region. Some say that he was a Jew by birth, for the reason that in his first Epistle to the Corinthians he says he is of the race of Jacob, which statement, however, may easily have a spiritual meaning. Others think that he came from Philippi, and that he was originally a pagan, from a passage in S. Paul's Epistle to the Philippians, ch. iv, ver. 3, &c. The account here given of his martyrdom is the generally accepted version (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon).

of Stafford, Archbishop of Canterbury, he was translated to that see in 1452, and promoted in the College by being raised to the rank of Cardinal Bishop of S. Rufina, and constituted legate a latere. He was twice Lord Chancellor, held three bishoprics, both archbishoprics, and is buried in Canterbury Cathedral, where his tomb still exists. He was therefore Cardinal of S. Balbina from December, 1439, to July, 1452.

¹ S. Balbina was born during the reign of Hadrian; she was the daughter of Quirinus, the custodian of Pope Alexander I. Quirinus informed his prisoner that he had a grown-up daughter, beautiful, but disfigured by a hideous sore (struma) on her neck. Having heard of the miracles of the Pope, Quirinus promised that he would become a Christian if Alexander would help his daughter. The Pope ordered him to bring her to his presence, and laid the chains (bojas) with which he was bound about her neck. On this a youth

(an angel), with a burning torch in his hand, appeared; after ordering the damsel to remain a virgin throughout her life, he vanished again. From that hour she was healed, and father and daughter with all their household were baptized. Quirinus suffered martyrdom; Balbina is said to have lived a pious life and to have died in peace in the year A.D. 130. According to other accounts, she also suffered martyrdom (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon).

¹ The church of S. Cecilia was founded on the site of her martyrdom. It is mentioned in the fifth century. The convent was founded by Pascal I, who also rebuilt the church and translated the remains of the saint from the Catacombs of S. Callixtus in 822. (In 1595 the sarcophagus of Pascal was opened; this event has been described by Baronius, Ann. Eccl., ad ann. 821, pp. 12-19; and by Bosio, Hist. passionis S. Caeciliae, p. 155.) After the first mention in the fifth century it is recorded, in the Liber Pontificalis, that on Nov. 22, 545, Pope Vigilius, while celebrating the feast-day of the saint, was surprised in this basilica by Anthemius Scribo, who had been sent from Constantinople by the Empress Theodora to capture him. The church was restored in 1283, and the altar and the confession are the work of Arnolfo, who also worked at S. Paul's outside the Walls (not to be confounded with Arnolfo di Cambio). The restorations of 1599 and 1823 did much to alter the character of the church, but the last restoration of Cardinal Rampolla in 1901 has, on the other hand, done much to restore its archaeological interest (Armellini, p. 179; Marucchi, p. 438; Nibby, p. 155).

² Armellini says that there was formerly a small oratorio in Trastevere dedicated to S. Edmund, near the church of S. Giovanni Battista dei Genovesi. Martinelli says it was built 'a quodam Anglo'. Piazza (Ensevolagio Romano, ovvero delle Opere Pie di Roma, 1699, p. 81) says: 'Oltre al sudetto Spedale (di S. Toma Cantuariense) ne fu istituito uno in Trastevere dietro la Chiesa di S. Grisogono da un Mercante Inglese, per i suoi Paesani, dedicandolo con una chiesa a S. Edmondo Re d'Inghilterra, ad uso e beneficio in particolare dei Mercanti Inglese, e Marinari, che veniuano da si lungo viaggio a Roma. Lo Spedale, con le sue entrate, fù soppresso & unito al sudetto Maggiore di San Tommaso Cantuariense, e questo al nominato Collegio Inglese. La chiesa di S. Edmondo, che per l'antichità minacciaua rouina, fu ultimamente fatto demolire da Alessandro VII, e transferite le S. Reliquie, che vi erano, con la sacra supellettile, et obbligo di Messe, alla medesima chiesa di S. Tommaso; et acciò non si perdesse il culto e la memoria di quel S. Rè, si eresse ivi un altare al medesimo, ove vi si conserva e vi si espone nel dì della festa una sua reliquia.' The text of the marble inscription relating to the suppression of the oratorio of S. Edmund, on May 29, 1664, will be found in Forcella, Iscrizioni delle chiese di Roma, tom. vii, p. 182, No. 378.

been martyred about the year 230 in the reign of Alexander Severus (222-35). Some authorities hold that her death occurred during the reign of Marcus Aurelius (161-80). She is believed to have been of noble birth and to have been a Christian from her childhood. The beautiful story of her conversion of her husband Valerian and his brother Tiburtius will be found in Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; see also Surius, Vitae Sanctorum, vol. xi, p. 638, Turin, 1879.

¹ The church of S. Maria in Trastevere is the first large church in Rome dedicated to the Virgin, Prima aedes Deiparae dicata, the earliest being S. Maria Antiqua. It is said to have been founded by S. Callixtus, by permission of Alexander Severus, in 222, on the site of the Taberna meritoria, a hospital for old soldiers, and to have been abandoned during the persecutions. It was reconstructed by Julius I in 340, and took the title of SS. Callixto e Giulio. In 828 Gregory IV attached a large Augustinian convent to the church. It was restored by Leo IV about 848, by Benedict III (857-8), and in 1139 almost completely rebuilt by Innocent III, to whom we owe the fine mosaics; it was again restored by Nicholas V, Pius V, and Clement XI, and finally by Pius IX in 1870 (Armellini, p. 414; Marucchi, p. 428; Nibby, pp. 140, 488).

¹ The date of S. Vitalis is not very certain, as the Epistle of S. Ambrose, which gives most of the evidence regarding him, is not quite clear on the point. The period, however, must be between A.D. 60 and 180. He was a soldier by profession, but it is not known why he left Milan to go to Ravenna. The name of the physician whom he befriended and buried was S. Ursicinus (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, April, vol. iii, p. 562).

³ The Church of SS. Peter and Marcellinus is very ancient, and was built in the Via Labicana over a temple of Isis. It is mentioned in the sixth century. Armellini gives an inscription, found in 1750, which would tend to show that the church dated from Pope Siricius (384-98), but in the Liber Pontificalis it is said: 'Fecit etiam Gregorius tertius de novo ecclesiam Sanctorum Marcellini et Petri prope Lateranam.' It is quite clear that this must refer to a restoration, or perhaps entire rebuilding, for the church is mentioned (as is said above) in the time of Gregory the Great (cf. Grisar, Storia di Roma e dei Papi, t. i, p. 254). The church was reconsecrated by Alexander IV in 1256, restored by Paul IV (1555-9); being in a ruinous state it was entirely reconstructed by Benedict XIV (1740-58), who had been its titular Cardinal (Armellini, p. 325; Marucchi, p. 351; Adinolfi, ii, p. 80; Nibby, p. 586).

¹ S. Marcelline was a priest, and Peter an exorcist of the Roman Church. Many other martyrs suffered with them, the numbers of the same varying from forty-four in the Acta Sanctorum—the names of two, Thomajus and Rogatus, being given—to 400 in an old Martyrologium of Trèves. They were martyred during the persecution of Diocletian in the year 304. The name of their judge is given variously as Serenus and Severus. The place of their death, formerly known as the silva nigra, was afterwards renamed the silva candida. Their bodies were buried, by a matron named Lucilla, on the Via Labicana, in which work of piety another matron named Firmina is said to have helped; they were afterwards removed to the Catacombs of S. Tiburtius. Constantine built a church on the spot in their honour, which church ranked as the second of the seven having a cardinal's title. It was destroyed by the Saracens and was not reconstructed, but was united with the Bishopric of Porto by Callixtus II. Later, a cemetery in Rome was named after the two saints (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum).

was rebuilt by Gregory IV in the ninth century; to him we owe the apse and the mosaics; it was altered by Paul II, and lastly by Cardinal Quirini in the year 1727 (Armellini, p. 327; Marucchi, p. 384; Nibby, p. 321).

¹ It is not clear whether SS. Abdon and Sennen came of their own free will to Rome, or whether they were brought in triumph from Persia by Decius as subreguli of that country, and were then martyred on account of their adherence to the Christian faith. Probably the latter was the case; the wording of the MS.—‘to be led so to Rome be fore his chare’—also gives that impression. The rest of the account agrees with the authorities, except that they were possibly buried in the cemetery ad ursum pileatum. Stadler mentions a marble relief bearing their names and portraits, and says that their heads each bear a crown and a Persian cap (cf. the illustration in the Acta Sanctorum, p. 130). The acts of these martyrs, however, are late in date, and cannot be accepted as authoritative (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, July, vol. vii, p. 130).

¹ The church of S. Pudenziana, like that of S. Prassede (ch. xlviii), is said to have been founded on property belonging to the family of Pudens, but to have been separated from the latter by the Vicus Patricius (Via Urbana). It was founded in the second century under S. Pius I, and took the name of titulus Pastoris or Pudentis. The term lector de Pudenziana occurs on a sepulchral monument of the year 384, when Ricimer and Clearcus were consuls. The church was restored under Hadrian I; Gregory VII in the eleventh century; Innocent II, twelfth century; by Cardinal Gaetani, sixteenth century; and lastly by Cardinal Bonaparte (Adinolfi, ii, p. 240; Armellini, p. 565; Marucchi, p. 364; Nibby, p. 677).

² S. Pudens from the earliest authorities appears to have been a Roman senator; he was the son of Punicus and Priscilla, and the friend of SS. Peter and Paul at Rome. His mother founded the earliest Christian cemetery. He was twice married. It is not quite certain which was the first wife, but the name of one wife was Claudia, a Briton by birth, who bare him two sons, SS. Novatus and Timotheus (2 Tim. iv. 21); the name of the other was Sabinella, the mother of SS. Pudenziana and Praxedis. S. Pudenziana is the first maiden recorded to have taken the veil, and is believed to have died in peace about the middle of the second century, after a life of piety (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon, vol. iv, p. 1005; Acta Sanctorum, May, vol. iv, p. 296).

¹ S. Sixtus, after a very short reign (257-8), was arrested in the cemetery of S. Calixtus and martyred, together with SS. Quartus, Felicissimus, Agapitus, Januarius, Vincentius, Magnus, and Stephanus. This was done by order of the Emperor Valerian, shortly before his departure on a journey to the East. Pope S. Stephen I appointed Sixtus his archdeacon, and nominated him as his successor. Before the outbreak of the persecution in which he suffered, he had taken the precaution of placing the heads of SS. Peter and Paul in safety (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Duchesne, Liber Pontificalis, vol. i, p. 155; Acta Sanctorum, August, vol. ii, p. 124).

² The church of SS. Cosmo and Damian was founded about 526 by Felix IV, who incorporated in it two pagan temples. Owing to the rise in the level of the ground in the Forum, Urban VIII raised the level of the floor of the church; he removed the old entrance doors, and replaced them on the higher level. The old altar, however, can still be seen in the subterranean crypt. The church was formerly designated in silice and in tribus fatis. The first name refers to the selce pavement 'ubi cecidit Simon Magus', the second to a name given to that part of the Forum from a statuary group of the three Fates (Armellini, p. 195; Adinolfi, i, p. 412; Marucchi, p. 355; Nibby, p. 182). Lorentzen, heist Tripolis, do man die drei stet gewan, do wurd er gemacht, do sind vil schoner merbelpild' (Muffel). The name Tripolis (probably a corruption of in tribus fatis) puzzles Vogt, and he thinks the arch meant is that of Titus. This, however, is some distance off, and the remains of the Arch of Fabius have more recently been discovered near this spot. Could it by any chance have been still standing in 1452? There are the remains of 'vil schoner merbelpild' scattered all around, including the memorial erected by the Senate in memory of the grandchildren of Augustus, &c.

Also, at this period, a considerable part of the Regia was still standing (Muffel, p. 44).

¹ The massacre of the Christians of the Theban Legion, which took place in 302, is fully described in Stadler. The account rests on the strongest evidence, and occurred at Octodurum (Martinach) in the Rhone Valley. It appears that the fate of the martyrs was brought about by their refusing to sacrifice to heathen gods, when preparing to start on a campaign. Mauritius is described as the Commander of the Legion, Exsuperius (not Exupius) as the Campiductor, and Candidus as the Senator militum. S. Moritz takes its name from S. Mauritius (Acta Sanctorum, September, vol. vi, p. 309).

¹ The account of SS. Cosmo and Damian, as given in the MS., agrees with the accepted authorities. They are called by the Greek Church ἀνάργυροι, because they were willing to heal the sick without fee or reward. They lived in this manner for some years in Aegea in Cilicia, and were martyred in that province by order of Lysias the governor thereof. This took place probably about the year 287. At the time of the Crusades an order of knighthood was established in their honour, the members of which lived according to the rule of the Basilians, whose duty it was to care for sick pilgrims and to release prisoners. It did not, however, have a long existence (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, September, vol. vii, p. 428).

² The remainder of this inscription, which still exists, is as follows: 'In qua plus fidei ☩ lux pretiosa micat † Venite × Sacro ☩ Crevit honore locus † Munus ut aetheria ☩ Vivat in arcepoli.' The portrait in mosaic of Felix IV (not VIII) was restored in 1660, unfortunately out of all resemblance to the original, which was probably a true likeness.

³ The church of S. Lorenzo in Lucina was founded in the fourth century. Lucina was a pious Roman matron, who converted her house into this basilica, which she constructed at her own expense. It was a station church in the sixth century, was restored by Benedict II about 685, then by Hadrian I in 780, and later by Celestine III, who reconsecrated it in May, 1196. Although it retains its old mediaeval porch, the interior was entirely remodelled in the seventeenth century. It was originally known as the Titulus Lucinae, under which name it is mentioned at the end of the fifth century. In July, 1872, several tombs of the eighth century were discovered near the church, while carrying out some works at the Palazzo Fiano. One of the epitaphs is of the time of Hadrian I (783), and refers to a deacon named Paul, who was present at the Roman Synod of that year (Armellini, p. 309; Marucchi, p. 405; Nibby, p. 301).

⁴ The Mart. Rom. says of S. Lucina, that she was a disciple of the Apostles SS. Peter and Paul, that she devoted her property and spent her life in helping Christians who were in need, in visiting those confined in prison, and burying the remains of the martyrs. The name is mentioned in many of the Acts of the Saints, but at widely different periods (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon).

² The church of S. Susanna is said to have been founded, late in the third century, in two houses which belonged to Pope S. Caius and his brother S. Gabinius, the father of S. Susanna. It was known under the name ad duas domos, and was in front of the Forum of Sallust. The name ad duas domos was altered to inter duas lauros in the Liber Pontificalis, but some excavations carried out in 1880 have disclosed the remains of ancient Roman houses of the third century on which the church stands. This would tend to show that the former name is correct (Aginolfi, ii, p. 328; Armellini, p. 637; Marucchi, p. 380; Nibby, p. 732).

⁴ S. Gabinius (or Gabinus) was the father of S. Susanna, and the brother of the Pope S. Caius. He was a learned man, and the author of several treatises against the heathen religion. On the death of his wife he entered the priesthood; he then devoted himself principally to the instruction of catechumens. He suffered martyrdom under Diocletian.

² S. Susanna, virgin martyr, was daughter to S. Gabinius and niece to S. Caius, Pope. Owing to her having taken a vow of virginity, she refused to enter into matrimonial relations with the adopted son of Diocletian, and her chastity was miraculously protected by an angel. She suffered great torments with unshaken fortitude, and was beheaded in her own chamber about the year 295 (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, August, vol. ii, p. 624).

¹ The story of the Invention of the Cross follows the usually accepted version, and needs no remark; but the life of S. Helena is of such interest to our nation that something may be said about her in this place. Her full name was Flavia Julia Helena; she was the wife of Constantius Chlorus, and the mother of Constantine the Great. The date and place of her birth are both uncertain. Some authors, especially the British, say that she was born in Britain at York or Colchester, and that she was the daughter of King Coilus. Others fix her birthplace at Trèves. The principal reason for accepting the former theory is that Constantine is believed to have been born in Britain. But even this is uncertain, as some authorities, notably Pagius and Tillemont, assert that he was born at Naissus (Nissa) in Servia. And it is curious that Bede never mentions the fact of his having first seen the light in our country. The only certainty is that Constantius Chlorus, who was co-emperor with Diocletian, died in Britain. Some German authorities have asserted that Trèves was the birthplace of S. Helena, but the grounds for this statement are even weaker than the grounds for the first-mentioned theory. As early as the sixth century Drepana in Bithynia was said to be the real place where she was born, and both Nicephorus and Procopius support this view. This town was on the Bosphorus, and was afterwards renamed Helenopolis after the empress. The probable date of her birth was A.D. 248, and S. Ambrose—who was a boy of five years of age when Constantius Chlorus died—says that she was of humble extraction, and was the manageress of a postal station when Constantius first met her. S. Ambrose, as the son of a prefect, may very easily have heard this from his own father. Eutropius, an imperial private secretary, in his Roman history states that after the death of Constantius, his son Constantine, born of a humble marriage (ex obscuriore matrimonio), was elected emperor in Britain; and he must have known the facts, as he was a Court official who accompanied Julian the Apostate to Persia. Some pagan writers even assert that Constantine was illegitimate, filius spurius, but this can hardly be true, and the statement is attributable to their hatred of the Christian empress. Had this been the case, the aristocratic and proud Diocletian would hardly have cast his eye on Constantius's natural son to succeed him after his death; nor would the son have dared to call his mother Augusta. Nor would Eumenides in his panegyric have presumed to say to him: Thou hast deserved the empire through thy birth; imperium nascendo meruisti. S. Helena was eventually divorced by Constantius, and settled at Trèves. Eutropius, in speaking of this, calls her the uxor of the emperor, and uses the words diremptis prioribus coniugiis in speaking of the divorce. Coins and inscriptions also bear witness to a legal union. So far as is known, Constantine was her only son. She died, at the age of eighty, in the year 328, at Byzantium or Nicomedia. Her body was brought to Rome by Constantine's orders (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, August, vol. iii, p. 548).

² The church of the SS. Quatuor Coronati existed on the Caelian Hill from the fourth or fifth century; it was rebuilt by Honorius I in the seventh, and by Leo IV in the ninth century. There is a convent attached to the church, but the history of the four martyrs is very obscure. After the sack of Rome by Robert Guiscard, Pascal II rebuilt the church; it was again restored under Martin V, by Cardinal Carillo, and later by Pius IV. Two Popes, Leo IV and Stephen VI, were elected in it (Adinolfi, i, p. 327; Armellini, p. 571; Marucchi, p. 223; Nibby, p. 682).

¹ SS. Marius and Martha came from Persia to Rome with their sons SS. Audifax and Abacuk, and suffered martyrdom during the reign of Claudius (268-70). Marius is sometimes called Marcus, Marinus, Maras, and Maris. Abacuk has many variants, such as Abachum, Abbacuc, Abacuc, Abachuch, Ambacuc, Ambacum, Ambacu, Abacen, and Nabuchum. The father and the two sons were taken prisoners at Ostia, and cruelly tortured before martyrdom; the mother was thrown into a well. They are sometimes (in Germany) venerated as the three physicians (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, January, vol. ii, pp. 214 and 1136.

² The church of S. Lorenzo in Damaso was erected by Pope S. Damasus near the ruins of the theatre of Pompey in the year 380. It was restored by Hadrian I and Leo III, and entirely reconstructed when Cardinal Riario built the adjoining palace of the Cancelleria. Up to this time the front of the church faced on the Via del Pellegrino, and, according to De Rossi, consisted of a double portico and three aisles with two rows of columns. Armellini adds, 'ma ciò che rendeva caratteristica e degna di rilevanza la distribuzione architettonica interiore dell' aula, era la posizione della nave così-detta trasversa, la quale non correva innanzi all' abside, come in tutte le altre basiliche, ma dietro alla medesima a modo di portico, cosicchè tutto l'edifizio era cinto ed abbracciato da portici.' This construction is described by Pope Damasus in his verses on the church, the text of which has come down to us. Bramante's work of the fifteenth century was finally restored by Valadier in the nineteenth (Armellini, p. 312; Marucchi, p. 419; Nibby, p. 291).

² S. Damasus I, a Spaniard by descent and a Roman by birth, was born about the year 306, and was appointed Archdeacon of the Roman Church in 355. He followed his predecessor Liberius into exile, but soon returned to Rome, and on the death of Liberius was elected to succeed him in October, 366. The opposition party, who held to the emperor, elected the Deacon Ursinus (Ursicinus) as antipope; a struggle took place, which led to bloodshed. Eventually Ursinus was banished from Rome to Gallia. S. Damasus worked hard to restore union to the Church, which was then much divided on account of the Arian and other heresies. Councils were held in Rome in 368 and 370, and he was present at the great Council of Constantinople in 381. He did much for the beautifying of Rome; he built some churches, restored others, and decorated many of the tombs of the martyrs. His finely-lettered inscriptions are still universally admired. He was a friend of S. Jerome, and asked him to revise the Vulgate. As our chronicler says, he ordered that psalms should be sung morning and evening in daily prayer; also that at the end of each psalm the doxology, Gloria patri, &c., should be sung. He died on Dec. 10, 384, aged 80; his remains were found in 1639 in a church built by him on the Via Ardeatina; they were placed under an altar in the church of S. Lorenzo in Damaso in 1645. Two editions of his works (in 1638 and 1754) have been published (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon).

¹ Of this long list of saints whose relics are to be found in S. Paul's, S. Timothy suffered martyrdom in Ephesus in the year A.D. 97. His relics were brought to Constantinople in 356, and afterwards a part of them were sent to Rome. S. Titus, his colleague, died in Crete at the advanced age of ninety-four, and was buried at Gortyna. His head is at S. Mark's, Venice, but his other relics appear to have been lost. S. Maurus and S. Appronianus will be found mentioned in the Heiligenlexikon; the story of Felix and Adactus is also found in that work. The three saints Simplicius (Simplicianus), Faustinus, and Beatrix suffered in the persecution of Diocletian in 302 or 303, and were buried by Lucina in the cemetery ad ursum pileatum on the road to Porto. At the cemetery near Ponte Galera the name of S. Beatrix can still be seen. S. Lucia was an aged widow, who with S. Geminianus was also martyred under Diocletian about 303. SS. Cyriacus, Largus, and Smaragdus perished in the same persecution; a short account of S. Ananias exists in Stadler, Heiligenlexikon.

² This beautiful story of S. Plautilla will be found in the Heiligenlexikon. She is believed to have been a Roman lady of good family, the sister of the Consul Clemens, and the mother of Flavia Domitilla. She died in peace (date uncertain), and her remains are said to rest in the church of SS. Nereo and Achilleo. Some relics of her are at S. Bartholomew (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, May, vol. v, p. 172; vol. vii, p. 818). The traditional site of the occurrence is shown in Plate III of De Rossi's Piante iconografiche di Roma. It is marked with a cross and the words 'aṽ hanc crucem S. Paulus puta defunctus velum mulieri reddidit'. The cross appears in Plate II, but not in Plate IV, nor afterwards. In all three (II, III, and IV) a bridge, and a chapel on the bank of a small stream, are shown close by the site of the cross.

³ The church of S. Martino ai Monti was constructed in the baths of Trajan, it is said (in the Liber Pontificalis), by S. Sylvester. In early times it was known as the titulus equitii, from the name of the owner of the property on which it stood. But it soon took the name of the Pope who dedicated it, and was then called titulus S. Silvestri. In it was held the synod against Hippolytus, Callixtus, and Victorinus in the year 324. Pope Symmachus, in the fifth century, erected another building over the old Basilica of S. Silvester, and dedicated it to S. Martin, Bishop of Tours, and to S. Silvester. The older church remained buried underground, and was only accidentally discovered in the seventeenth century. The basilica was restored in the reigns of Hadrian I, Sergius II, and Innocent III. Leo IV decorated it with paintings and mosaics. In the sixteenth century, Cardinal Diomede Caraffa rebuilt it; under Pius IV, S. Carlo Borromeo restored the ceiling. In 1650 the General of the Carmelites, Antonio Filippini, spent his whole patrimony of 70,000 scudi in beautifying the church. The façade was renewed in 1676; finally, Cardinal Zelada again restored the building at great expense (Adinolfi, ii, p. 121; Armellini, p. 459; Marucchi, p. 319; Nibby, p. 543).

² S. Martin I was elected Pope July 5, 649; died Sept. 15, 655. Olympius, the chamberlain to the Emperor Constans, was sent to Italy as exarch, and appears to have met with his death in Sicily (Anastasius, In Vit. Mart.). The account given here agrees with that of the usually accepted authorities (Smith, Dictionary of Christian Biography; Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Duchesne, Liber Pontificalis, vol. i, p. 336; Surius, vol. xi, p. 421).

³ The church of S. Silvester was originally known as S. Dionysius inter duos hortos or cata Pauli. The Liber Pontificalis, in the life of Paul I (757-67), says that he built the church and monastery in his own house in honour of SS. Sylvester and Stephen I, both of whom were popes, but that he dedicated the church to S. Dionysius. Perhaps the church had been commenced by his brother and predecessor Stephen II, as will be seen from the Acts of SS. Degna and Emerita (Martinelli, op. cit., p. 356). Mallius confirms this in de Abb., c. xxxi. The church was called inter duos hortos on account of the gardens in this neighbourhood in the Middle Ages. Considerable remains of antiquities, amongst them some of Mithraic worship, have been found here from time to time; many of them are preserved in the courtyard in front of the church. It is now known as S. Silvestro in Capite, because the relic of the head of S. John Baptist is preserved here. In the tenth century the church was a very important one, and was given possession of the Column of Marcus Aurelius, which no doubt helped to save that monument from destruction. Innocent III restored the church in the twelfth century; the campanile is of his date. The church was altered by Clement VIII, restored by Clement XI a century later, and bestowed upon the English Catholics by Leo XIII in 1890 (Armellini, p. 220; Marucchi, p. 395; Nibby, p. 713).

² The church of S. Nicola in Carcere was constructed about the sixth century in the Forum Olitorium, over the ancient Temple of Piety, in the district known as ad elephantum. It takes its name from a prison, mentioned by Pliny (N. H., vii, c. 36): 'et locus ille eidem consecratus deae C. Quinctio M. Acilio Coss. Templo Pietatis exstructo in illius carceris sede, ubi nunc Marcelli theatrum est.' The remembrance of the theatre lasted, for it is mentioned again in the Life of Hadrian I (Lib. Pont. in Adr. v. i): 'deductisque elephanto in carcerem publicum illic coram universo populo examinati sunt.' The church was restored by Felix IV, Boniface IV, Nicholas III, and Alexander VI, and was altered to its present form in 1599 by Cardinal Pietro Aldobrandini (Armellini, p. 475; Marucchi, p. 517; Nibby, p. 557; De Rossi, Bull. d'Arch. Crist., 1873, p. 82).

³ Muffel, without mentioning the name of the church, says: 'Item daselbst sind die zwen abtgotter die man den gensen gemacht hat die Rom behielten' (erhalten = retten) 'do man eingrub unter dem Capitolium' (p. 54).

² S. Nicholas was born at Patara in Lycia, the names of his parents being Epiphanius and Johanna. His uncle was Nicholas, Bishop of Myra; the nephew, after travelling as a pilgrim to Jerusalem and Mount Sion, was also elected bishop of the same place in succession to one Johannes, who held the see between the uncle and the nephew. He was a man of great piety and charity, and performed many miracles. He attended the Council of Nicaea; after that event he travelled to Rome, passing through Bari on the way. He died at Myra on December 6, between 345 and 352. His body was translated to Bari in Apulia in the year 1087. He is generally shown in art with three golden apples in his hand. These refer either to three maidens whom he saved from a life of sin, or to the fact that at the Council of Nicaea he upheld the dogma of the equality of the Three Persons in the Trinity (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Beatillo, Historia della vita, dei miracoli, &c. del S. Nicolò di Mira).

² Armellini (p. 562) gives a similar inscription as having been seen in the fourteenth century at S. Prisca, and says: 'Nel decimo quarto secolo tuttora si leggeva nell' architrave della porta di quella chiesa la seguente iscrizione, che Pietro Sabino, autore di quel medesimo secolo, vide incisa litteris antiquis (Codex Marcian. lat. x. 195, p. 303):

Haec domus est aquilae seu Priscæ virginis almae

Quos lupē? paule tuo ore vehis domino

Hic petre divini tribuebas fercula verbi

Sæpius hocce loco sacrificans domino';

and adds: 'L'epigramma come risulta dallo stile e del medio evo.' De Rossi in the Sylloge of Petrus Sabinus gives this inscription, saying: 'N° 165. Supra Ianuam templi S. prisce. In Aventino. Antiquis litteris marmori InCisis. Haec domus est Aquilae &c.'; adding the following note: 'Periit. Unus Sabinus epigramma integrum descripsit. Marinius e schedis Terribilinii dedit mutilum et corruptum, adnotans: "fortasse spectare ad aetatem Callisti III qui aedem S. Priscæ instauravit (Mai, l. c. p. 148, 3), cuius est epigramma sequens N° 166. Sed Sabinus testatur carmen incisum esse marmori litteris antiquis, saeculi, opinor, noni vel decimi"' (v. 2, cf. Aratorem, de Actibus Apost. II, v. 485 :

'O Paule rapax dedit hoc benedictio Iacob

Nomen habere tibi; quid iam remanebit in orbe

Quod non ore trahas, postquam solertia Graia

Cessit et invictas in dogmata vincis Athenas?'

(De Rossi, Inscriptiones Christianae Urbis Romae, vol. ii, p. 443.) Whoever put up the inscription in S. Peter's—copying that of S. Prisca, where the Apostle is believed to have preached and baptized—would appear to have left out the second line altogether, not understanding the curious epithet lupus as applied to S. Paul. The expression seems also to have astonished Armellini.

¹ The church of S. Crisogono is believed to date from the Constantinian period. It is mentioned in the fifth century; Gregory III in 731 restored the roof, and adorned the walls and the apse with pictures. (For the recent excavations and discovery of frescoes in the subterranean church, cf. Prof. Marucchi's paper on this subject in the Journal of the B. and A. A. Society). Giovanni da Crema, Papal Legate to England under Honorius II, was titular cardinal in 1123; he restored the church, as also did Cardinal Scipio Borghese in 1623. Stephen Langton, Archbishop of Canterbury, was titular of S. Crisogono, as was Cardinal Gioacchino Pecci when he was elected Pope, taking the name of Leo XIII (Armellini, p. 202; Marucchi, p. 452; Nibby, p. 190).

¹ The life of S. Chrysogonus, as generally accepted, differs entirely from that given by our chronicler. He is generally associated with S. Zoilus, and they were martyred in Aquileia in North Italy, during the persecution of Diocletian. The Mart. Rom. (in which only S. Chrysogonus is mentioned) says that after a long imprisonment in Rome he was taken to Aquileia, beheaded there, and his body cast into the sea. The fishes bare his body to land, so that it could receive Christian burial. His head is preserved in the church dedicated to him in Rome; his body, however, is at Venice. There is no mention of S. Anastasia or of the aquae gradatae in Stadler. Another authority places them near Aquileia, probably on the road to Grado (Heiligenlexikon; Bertoli, Antichità di Aquileia, pp. 9-11).

² S. Zoilus was a priest in Aquileia, who buried S. Chrysogonus in his own house, after the martyrdom of the saint. It is stated that when he laid the decapitated head with the trunk, they were miraculously joined together again. He suffered in Aquileia, and his relics are still venerated there (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon).

³ The site of S. Ciriaco was discovered in 1874, in some excavations which were carried out between the Ministry of Finance and the Female Orphan Asylum of the Termini. It consisted formerly of a church and a monastery, dates from the time of S. Marcellus, was restored under Hadrian I, Leo II, and Gregory IV, but was for some unknown reason abandoned and fell to ruin in the sixteenth century. Lonigi says that the church had fallen in his time. 'Giace hora quasi distrutta dentro la vigna dei padri di S. Maria degli Angeli' (Adinolfi, ii, 264; Armellini, p. 189). '¶ Zu unser lieben frowen inviolata dye kirch heist ouch zum Sant Ciriaco' (Ein Büchlin, &c., Strassburg, 1500, p. E vi, B.M.); and on p. F ii we find: 'Zû sant ciriaco lygt by dem pallast den man nennet Thermes die kirch ist zergangen.'

³ S. Cyriacus is said to have suffered martyrdom in Rome about the year 303, in the persecution of Diocletian, together with SS. Largus, Smaragdus, and twenty other Christians. He worked many miracles; as related by our chronicler, he is said to have delivered Arthemias (Artemia), the daughter of Diocletian, of an evil spirit. He was then sent to Sapor, King of Persia, whose daughter Jobia was similarly afflicted. The result of the miracle in delivering the latter is said to have been that the king was baptized with 430 others, and that when S. Cyriacus returned to Rome he was barbarously tortured and martyred by order of Maximian. All this, however, is disputed, and the Bollandists point out that the name of the daughter of Diocletian was Valeria and not Arthemias.

Baronius also in his Annals says that there was no Sapor, King of Persia, during the reign of Diocletian. It is generally accepted that S. Cyriacus suffered martyrdom under Maximian (286–305 and 306–10), and that he was a deacon under S. Marcellus (308–9), so his and his companions' martyrdom probably occurred about 309, and not in 303. They were buried on the Via Salaria near the gardens of Sallust, and afterwards were removed to a cemetery on the Via Ostiensis (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, August, vol. ii, p. 327).

² 'Ouch is hie dat heufft van sijnt Foco des keyzers' (Ritter A. von Harff, Pilgerfahrt in den Jahren 1496–9, p. 27 (Cöln, 1860). There are several saints named Phocas, who, of course, have no connexion with the emperor of that name. The relic here mentioned is either that of S. Phocas the gardener-saint of Sinope (not to be confused with S. Phocas, Bishop of Sinope), or of S. Phocas who was martyred at Antioch. There was formerly a church dedicated to the former not far from the Tre Fontane, but it has disappeared (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon).

³ As regards the members of the Colonna family mentioned in the chronicle, the following notes may be of interest. At the election of Nicholas V, Prospero Colonna was beaten by only one vote, according to a letter from Fra Cruelles, Prior of the Catalan Monastery of S. Lorens del Mont (Mélanges archéol. vol. xxiii, p. 419). Prospero Colonna was made Cardinal of S. George in 1426, and died in 1463. Oddo Colonna was elected Pope as Martin V in 1417, and died in 1431. Egidio Colonna was a well-known writer in his day. ¹ S. Marcellus was Pope from 308 to 309 (or 310), and succeeded S. Marcellinus. Owing to the similarity of the names there is some confusion in regard to these two popes and the dates concerning them. According to the Liber Pontificalis, the Holy See was about this time vacant for seven years; according to other authorities, from three to three and a half years. S. Marcellus was a Roman by birth, the son of Benedictus, and lived in the Via Lata. He founded the Catacombs of Priscilla on the Via Salaria, and created twenty-five new tituli or Christian parish churches. He became a Christian about the time of the Emperors Galerius, Maximian, and Constantius Chlorus. He was savagely flogged and expelled from the city. This is proved by his epitaph. He appears to have returned shortly afterwards, and to have been condemned to labour in the public stables, where he died. He was buried in the cemetery of Priscilla (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, January, vol. ii, p. 3; Duchesne, Liber Pontificalis, vol. i, p. 164).

¹ The meaning of this word is obscure. One possible derivation is from miselli, poor, miserable folk, from which our word measly comes; the same word misellis occurs in Capgrave's Life of S. Gilbert of Sempringham, E. E. Text Society, No. 140 of 1910, ch. iv, p. 67, l. 31; the meaning given in the glossary of that work is 'lepers'. (In the Middle Ages this term 'measly' was synonymous with lepers.) The difficulty arises: would his friends have counselled him to dwell for a term with people of this description, 'for reformation of his health'? There is a French word musel, which means one who muses, a contemplative person, which term would readily apply to hermits. Again, S. Apollinaris is believed to have visited Burgundy at some time or other, and therefore may have lived at Mussy-l'Évêque in that province. After he left Classis, however, he went to Dalmatia, and thence returned to Classis only to be martyred there. The word Moslim or Mussulmen is out of the question, as it is not found so early; in fact, our chronicler always uses the word 'Sarsines', or Saracens. One possible explanation is suggested in the following note.

² S. Apollinaris was the first Bishop of Ravenna, where he was sent by S. Peter to preach the Gospel. As he came from Antioch to Rome with the Apostle in the reign of the Emperor Claudius he is believed by some to be by birth a citizen of Antioch, and to have been one of the disciples. The Bollandists fix the date of his mission to Ravenna as occurring in the year A.D. 46. S. Peter Chrosologus (Chrysostom), Bishop of Ravenna, says (Serm. 128) that S. Apollinaris had on several occasions shed his blood for the faith, and had desired nothing so much as to die for it, but that our Lord had kept him long in the service of the Church, and had not permitted him to be condemned to death by his persecutors. From this many say that he never suffered martyrdom, but the Mart. Rom. calls him martyr, and fixes the date of his death as July 23, A.D. 75, in the reign of the Emperor Vespasian. S. Apollinaris preached in many lands: in Lombardy, in Moesia, in Thrace, and on the Danube. His travels in Moesia may possibly have given rise to the word 'myselles' (see preceding note) (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, July, vol. v, p. 328).

¹ S. Stephen in Celio Monte is the church on the Caelian now known as S. Stephen the Round. But the latter name (up to the twelfth century) was given to the small round church (Temple of Vesta) near the church of S. Maria in Cosmedin on the banks of the Tiber, which was first dedicated to S. Stephen, and afterwards to S. Maria del Sole. The codex of Turin, that of Camerarius, as well as that of Signorili, all agree on this point; when the church was visited by Alexander VII, we read: 'ecclesia S. Stephani rotundi supra flumen.' But after the name was changed, the term rotundus was applied to the church on the Caelian. The date of the construction of the latter is the subject of some controversy. It is said to have been built by Pope Simplicius in the fifth century. Armellini does not agree with those who believe the building to be originally pagan, but is of opinion that it is a Christian work, both in plan and construction. He quotes Huebsch, Die altchristlichen Kirchen, pp. 36-7, in favour of this view, to which De Rossi in La Basilica di S. Stefano rotondo, Rome, 1886, also adheres. Marucchi, on the other hand, is inclined to think that it was part of the macellum magnum (Adinolfi, i, p. 336; Armellini, p. 631; Marucchi, p. 219; Nibby, p. 727).

¹ There is some confusion about S. Judas Quiriacus (Cyriacus), Bishop of Jerusalem. He was probably not the S. Cyriacus converted by S. Helena, and said to have been martyred by Julian the Apostate; it is known that there was no bishop of that name in Jerusalem in Julian's time. Some authors therefore make him Bishop of Ancona, where he is now the patron saint of the city. But there was a Bishop Judas—who was killed in a rising of the Jews about the year 133—under the Emperor Hadrian. He possibly assumed the name Quiriacus, on account of the detestation in which his own name was held by Christians. He is mentioned by Theodoricus Pauli as having suffered martyrdom in Hadrian's reign (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, May, vol. i, p. 439).

² S. Giovanni a Porta Latina is a very ancient church, founded by Pope Gelasius I in the fifth century, rebuilt by Hadrian I in 772, and again restored in the twelfth and sixteenth centuries. According to Crescimbeni (Storia di S. Giovanni a porta Latina, p. 203 sq.), Leo II attached it to S. John Lateran. From Lucius II to Boniface VIII it belonged to the Benedictines; it was then transferred to the Trinitarians, and now belongs to French Franciscans (Armellini, p. 272; Marucchi, p. 170; Duchesne, Liber Pontificalis, p. 508; Nibby, p. 269).

² Theodulphus, Bishop of Orléans, lived at the end of Charlemagne's reign and the beginning of that of Louis le Débonnaire. He was bishop at the time of the Council of Frankfurt in 794. He was chosen by Charlemagne to sign his will in 811, and by Louis in 816 to receive the Pope, who was coming to crown the emperor at Rheims. The incident mentioned by our author is fully described by Moreri. Theodulphus died about 821 or 822; for Jonas, his successor in the bishopric of Orléans, was sent on a mission to Pope Eugenius II by Louis in 824 (Moreri, Dictionnaire historique).

⁴ The church of S. Praxede is said to have been built on a property belonging to the family of Pudens. The title is first mentioned about the end of the fifth century. It was largely restored in the ninth century by Pascal I, to whom we owe the mosaics. It was also repaired by S. Carlo Borromeo, who was titular of the church, and finally restored in the eighteenth century (Adinolfi, ii, p. 129; Armellini, p. 555; Marucchi, p. 323; Nibby, p. 670).

² The S. Valentine here referred to was a priest, who suffered martyrdom in the reign of Claudius (Gothicus). The martyrdom took place in Rome before the Porta Flaminia. For centuries there was a church near the spot dedicated to him, in which his relics were preserved. This church was founded by S. Julius, Pope, and restored by Theodore; in the seventeenth century only a few ruins showed where it had once existed (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, February, vol. ii, p. 751).

³ The church of SS. Nereus and Achilleus was originally known under the name of the Titulus Fasciolae, from a fasciola, or bandage, which fell from a wound on the foot of S. Peter during his flight from Rome, after his escape from the Mamertine prison. It is first mentioned in an inscription of A.D. 471, which relates to a priest who was the father of Felix III. The church was restored by Leo III about 800; the mosaics are of his period. At the end of the thirteenth century the church was almost abandoned, and the principal relics were removed by Gregory IX to S. Adriano. About the end of the fifteenth century Sixtus IV repaired it, but it again fell into decay. Finally it was restored by Cardinal Baronio in 1597, and the relics were brought back with great solemnity (Armellini, p. 467; Marucchi, p. 163).

² S. Nereus and Achilleus were servants of Flavia Domitilla, and were baptized by S. Peter together with her, her mother Plautilla, and two maids. The cause of their martyrdom appears to have been their conversion of their mistress, who was betrothed to one Aurelian. She was in the habit of spending much time on her toilet and the care of her person; one day Nereus said to her: 'O Domitilla, how happy wouldst thou be, wert thou to spend as much time in beautifying thyself for thy heavenly bridegroom.' This speech impressed the maid, and eventually she joined the Christian faith, taking vows of lifelong chastity. All three were exiled to Ponza near Terracina, and were martyred there by the Consul Memmius Rufus. Their bodies were brought to Rome by S. Auspicius, and buried on the property of S. Domitilla in the Via Ardentina (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, May, vol. iii, p. 4; vol. vii, p. 707).

¹ S. Prisca (Priscilla) was the daughter of a Roman of consular rank, and is the proto-martyr of the West. She is believed to have suffered at the early age of 13, during the persecution of Claudius. On her refusing, even after torture, to worship heathen gods, she was taken out to the third milestone of the Via Ostiensis and there beheaded about the year 50. Here she was buried, and her remains were translated to the church named after her by Pope S. Eutichianus (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, January, vol. ii, p. 183).

¹ S. Martial was the first Bishop of Limoges. One version says that he died in the latter half of the third century, and that he was contemporary with the Emperor Decius; this statement is to be found in the history of Gregory of Tours (Hist., i. 28). The account here given of him by our chronicler is open to doubt; the question has given rise to much discussion. The Bollandists leave it open, and say that S. Martial lived either in the first or in the third century (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, June, vol. v, p. 535).

¹ S. Maria della Rotonda, or ad Martyres, was consecrated by Pope Boniface IV on May 13, 608. In 655 Constans II, who removed so many treasures from Rome, stripped the roof of its gilt bronze tiles and removed them to Constantinople; this work of destruction was completed in 1632 by Urban VIII, who melted down the remains of the bronze roof for the baldacchino of S. Peter's. The church was repaired by Benedict II in 684, Gregory III in 735, Anastasius IV in 1153, and Eugenius IV in 1434. Pius IV repaired the great bronze doors, and Urban VIII restored the façade in 1634, adding two clumsy campanili which were afterwards removed. The Volto Santo was kept here for centuries in a chest locked with thirteen keys, of which each Rione of the town possessed one (Armellini, p. 346; Adinolfi, ii, p. 407; Marucchi, p. 412; Nibby, p. 406).

¹ The church of S. Maria sopra Minerva was erected over a temple dedicated to that goddess, the cella of which could be traced in the adjoining convent until the sixteenth century. S. Zacharias, about the year 750, granted it to Greek Basilian nuns, who, however, abandoned it. It was given in 1370 by the Senate and people of Rome to the Dominicans of S. Sabina, and was entirely reconstructed. The interior was restored and redecorated at great expense in 1849-54, but unfortunately in the most florid style. This is all the more to be regretted, as this is the only Gothic church in Rome which retains to any extent its original style (Armellini, p. 406; Marucchi, p. 514; Nibby, p. 414; Masetti, Memorie storiche della chiesa di S. Maria sopra Minerva, Rome, 1855). Part of the temple existed at the time our author wrote, for Muffel says: 'ist der abtgotter tempel gewest, Minerfa genannt, ein gar herlich kloster, die ist ein gottin gewest der streit, der waffen, und des alten tempels stet nur noch ein stuck' (p. 51). Fulgentius Plauciades (who must not be confused with Fulgentius Ruspensis) lived about A.D. 520, and is believed to have been Bishop of Carthage. He was the author of three books of mythology, addressed to a priest named Catus. A book of the allegories of Virgil, addressed to Chalchides the grammarian, is also attributed to him (Moreri, Dictionnaire historique).

² The church of S. Maria Annunziata (Nunziatella) is near the Via Ardeatina, about three miles from the city. It was consecrated by Honorius III in 1220, probably on the site of an older church (Nibby, Dintorni di Roma, f. iii, p. 561). There used to be an old pilgrims' road from Tre Fontane to this church, and thence on to S. Sebastiano. The latter part of it exists, and is still much used on the day of the Annunciation, and on the first Sunday in May. There are some catacombs close by, with some interesting frescoes. Inside the church, which is now in an abandoned condition, will be found some remains of its former importance. In the apse there is a fine fresco (much restored) of the Quattro Cento, the subject being the Annunciation. There is a cosmatesque pavement in front of the high altar and a cosmatesque tabernacle in the sacristy, both of which appear to belong to the restoration of Honorius III. There is an ancient stone altar in the sacristy which probably was in the older church, and the dedicatory inscription of Honorius III is still in situ, on the interior wall of the building (Armellini, p. 729).

³ The church of S. Maria Transpontina was known under no less than ten names, of which Armellini gives us nine, as follows: In capite porticus, in capite pontis, transpontem, transpadina, transpontina, traspadina, in transpodina, transpodine, and in cosmedin. The tenth, in turrispadina, is given by Signorili. The existing church, of the same name, was built on quite a different spot, and most authorities agree that the old church was near the Castle of S. Angelo, though Adinolfi thinks (reasoning from the name) that it was nearer the old bridge which no longer exists, and was on the platea castelli mentioned in documents of the Middle Ages. Writers disagree as to under whose pontificate the old church was pulled down in order to rebuild it on another site. Donati (Roma vetus et recens, I. II, c. 9, p. 371) says that it was done by Alexander VI; Felini, in his treatise, p. 60, and Alveri (Roma in ogni stato, p. 2^a), think it was Pius IV; the annotators of the Bollario Vaticano give Sixtus V; Torrigio (Grotte Vaticane, p. 134) says that it was where the ditch of the castle was in his time, and that it was pulled down by Pius IV in July, 1564, in order to rebuild the bastions of the fortress. Adinolfi thinks that Felini and Alveri are probably right in the view they take (Adinolfi, La portica di S. Pietro, ossia borgo, nell' età di mezzo, p. 67; Armellini, p. 348; Nibby, p. 485). One of the meanings of podium given by Ducange is hill or castle: can the meaning transpodium possibly be the church across or beyond the Castle of S. Angelo?

¹ The church of S. Maria de palma is the one so familiar now under the name of the Domine quo vadis. It is first mentioned as the church 'ubi Dominus apparuit', and appears to have been known as early as the ninth century. As time went on it was called de palma, ad palmas, ad passus, plantarum, ad transitum, of which terms Armellini says: '... alcune delle quali si riferiscono all' apparizione storica, altre ad una pietra sulla quale sono scolpite due impressioni di piedi nelle quali la pietà dei pellegrini dell' età di mezzo ritrovò le orme miracolose del Salvatore. Di questa pietra non si trova però alcuna allusione se non nei secoli posteriori.' Finally, in the fourteenth century it was generally known as S. Maria delle Palme or del Passo, and this name continued till the sixteenth or seventeenth century. In the E. E. Text Society's vol. No. 25 for 1867, p. 7, will be found, in the Vernon MS. (fourteenth century) on the Stacions of Rome, a passage in which the church is called the Palmalle, or footsole. The church was rebuilt in 1620 under Clement VIII, and the façade is due to Cardinal Barberini in 1637 (Armellini, p. 704; Marucchi, p. 515).

² It will be noticed that our chronicler fixes the precise spot of the meeting at a bow-shot's distance from the church, and that this spot was then marked by a cross, and called the Domine quo vadis. It is now marked by the small circular chapel built by Cardinal Pole. Muffel agrees with our author, and says that the first altar, where Christ, bearing the cross, appeared to Peter, is 700 paces from the spot where He disappeared, leaving the mark of His feet on the stone, where a church has been built to record the place. Then follows a curious legend about another small church in this neighbourhood: 'Item so ist ein capellen unser liben frawen auch auf dem weg gen

¹ This description of the miraculous picture is absolutely correct in every detail. It is still preserved over the high altar of the church, and was originally in the chapel of the Sancta Sanctorum, until it was brought here by Gregory IX as described by our chronicler. In Mid Lent a procession is formed in the church and the picture is exposed. It remains open to view until the Tuesday following the first Sunday after Easter (in albis), when it is again covered. It is much blackened with age, but there is a good copy (old) behind the high altar, from which it can be studied better. Muffel mentions this picture also, and says (p. 53, ed. Vogt): 'do ist gar ein andechtig unser Frawen pild, das sand lucas gemacht hat, sol ir gleich sein.' Also in the oldest German Mirabilia (about 1475) we find: 'Czu unser lieben Frawen de populo . . . do ist unser lieben Frawen pilt, hat Sc. Lucas gemalet.'

² Muffel's account of the foundation of this church agrees in all particulars with the above; except that he says, as regards the origin of the name: 'die capellen ward gantz gepauet von allem volk nur in eim tag, und darumb wurd sie geheissen Maria de populo' (p. 53).

¹ S. Maria de penis inferni was on the same site as the church of S. Maria Liberatrice, and was built on or near the ruins of S. Maria Antiqua which has been so recently excavated in the Forum. The existence of the interesting ancient church, now brought to light by the demolition of S. Maria Liberatrice, was well known, and the frescoes had been seen and described more or less correctly before the demolition was determined upon (see Armellini). It is not known when the church of S. Maria Antiqua was abandoned, but it is believed to have occurred about the end of the eighth or beginning of the ninth century. The more modern church was constructed, according to Marucchi, in the sixteenth century, and was restored by Cardinal Lante in 1617. But it seems clear from our author that a church existed there in the fifteenth century, that it was a station church, and that there was an inscription in it which explained the origin of the title de penis inferni (Armellini, p. 357; Marucchi, p. 247; Nibby, p. 377).

² Graf quotes the Storia di S. Silvestro, ed. by Michele Melga, Naples, 1859, which says that Peter speaks as follows to S. Silvester: 'Incontanente che tu, Silvestro, giugnerai allo dragone, e tu dirai cotali parole: Jesu cristo, nato della Vergine per virtù dello Spirito Santo, e quale fu crocifisso e sopellito, e ruscitò dalla morte; el quale andò in cielo, e siede dalla mano dritta del suo padre; el quale verrà nella fine del mondo a giudicare e giusti e peccatori, si ti manda, comandando, Settanas, el quale abita in

¹ This stone was at one time believed to be a magical work of Vergil, and was called Bocca della Verità for the reason given in the text. But, according to the Mirabilia, it was formerly known as the rota, for we find: 'In porticu eiusdem' (S. Maria in Cosmedin) 'est magna rota lapidea ad molae formam, cui foramina quinque adsunt, quasi oris, narium, et oculorum, et vocant Bocca della Verità.' See Graf, Roma nella memoria, &c., vol. ii, p. 139. See also article by Ersilia Lovatelli-Caetani in the Nuova Antologia, cxvii, 1891, pp. 152-9. In the Mirabilia also occurs the following passage: 'Ad sanctam Mariam in fontana templum Fauni quod simulacrum locutus est Iuliano et decepit eum.' This refers to the story of the widow who entrusted her property to Julian the Apostate, and was robbed by him. She demanded that Julian should be sworn in presence of an idol she had found in the Tiber, an image of Mercury. When Julian, by order of the Pope (whose chaplain he was!), introduces his hand into the mouth of the idol and swears, his hand is caught in the closing mouth, and his guilt thereby proved (Graf, vol. ii, pp. 135 sqq.). 'Una pietra tonda a modo di macina con uno viso intagliatovi dentro che si chiama la lapida della verità, che anticamente aveva virtù di mostrare quando una donna avessi fatto fallo al suo marito' (Rucellai, Il Giubileo dell' anno santo 1450, Archiv. St. Pat., 1881, vol. iv, fasc. iv, p. 580).

¹ The church of S. Maria Imperatrix has entirely disappeared. In a note (p. 165) Nichols says: 'S. Gregory in Martio is identified with the little chapel of S. Maria Imperatrice, which lately existed in the garden of the English sculptor Warrington Wood, at the Villa Campana, in the angle between the Via S. Giovanni Laterano and the Via SS. Quattro.' This agrees exactly with the position described in the MS. Armellini gives the same indication of its existence in the Villa Campana (now built over), and adds that Mellini read, in an inscription, a legend stating that the image of the Virgin had miraculously spoken to S. Gregory (not to S. Celestine). In another place (p. 447) he says that the image was transferred to S. Maria delle Grazie, a small oratory attached to the Lateran Hospital (Nichols, Marvels of Rome, p. 165, n. 382; Armellini, pp. 286, 447). In the Church of SS. Cosmas and Damian there is a written tablet connecting the miracle with S. Gregory; Marucchi, in the index of his book (p. 513), says that it happened to S. Gregory. There is no mention of the occurrence in the article on S. Celestine in Stadler's Heiligenlexikon. 'Item zū sant Marcellino lygt hinter unser frowen capell keyserin im wingarten' (Ein Büchlin, Strassburg, 1500, p. E iiii B.M, p. E iii v, Bodleian copy): See also Muffel, p. 18; also cf. Adinolfi, vol. i, pp. 218, 302.

² Our author can hardly be referring to the church now called S. Maria della Consolazione, inasmuch as Armellini and Marucchi agree that it was built in 1470. There was, however, a miraculous picture of the Virgin in the Vicus Jugarius, in the portico of the granaries of the Mattei. Whether there was an oratory or not, is not quite clear in Bruzio's narration, as quoted by Armellini (Armellini, p. 383; Marucchi, Appendix, p. 513).

¹ The church of S. Maria in Porticu is also called S. Galla, having been founded by S. Galla, daughter of Symmachus, mentioned by S. Gregory in his Dialogues (lib. IV, cxiii). It was consecrated by S. John I in the time of Theodoric. The portico from which it takes its cognomen was known in the Middle Ages by the name of the Porticus Gallatorum. The church was rebuilt by Gregory VII (Hildebrand) in the year 1073, and was restored by the Odescalchi family in the eighteenth century. The miraculous fresco was removed by Alexander VII to the church of S. Maria in Campitelli, with which this church must not be confused (Armellini, p. 360; Nibby, p. 357; Marucchi, Appendix, p. 506).

³ 'but' in margin of MS.

⁴ S. Galla was the daughter of Symmachus, who, together with Boethius, was executed during Theodoric's reign. She was widowed shortly after her marriage, and Fulgentius Ruspensis addressed his letter de statu viduarum to her. After the miraculous apparition of the Blessed Virgin she converted her house into a church. She then retired to a cell on the Vatican, and gave all her wealth to the poor. She bore with patience great suffering, due to an incurable disease; and, after a life of charity and piety, died about the middle of the sixth century (Stadler, Heiligenlexikon; Acta Sanctorum, October, vol. iii, p. 147).
